'Teamwork To Keep War Away' Asked By Roosevelt

Urges Farm, Labor, Industry to Work Together, Backs Arms Plant Draft

(Roosevelt's Text, Page 9.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night indorsed defense plant conscription if manpower is to be drafted and called for "teamwork" between labor, industry and agriculture "to keep war away from these shores for all time."

It was the President's first major campaign address billed as "political," and it struck repeatedly, though never by name, at the campaign challenge on foreign and domestic issues of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee.

Answers Charges

Mr. Roosevelt spoke before the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers. He promised that the New Deal in the national defense effort will not abandon "the progress we are making in social and labor legislation." He said there is nothing in the present emergency to justify a retreat.

The President told the teamsters that, along with soldiers, sailors, guns, tanks and planes, there was needed the moral strength of a united people fortified by these social aims—"conservation of resources, assistance to agriculture, housing and help to the underprivileged."

Touches Other Issues

To charges that he is attempting to lead the Nation into war, he replied," I hate war now more than ever" and declared his one supreme determination is to keep war away from this continent. He quoted and indorsed the Democratic platform pledge not to participate in foreign wars or fight outside this hemisphere except in case of attack.

Appeasement he called "a polite word for misdirected partisanship" and he asked for an end "to the sort of appeasement which seeks to keep us helpless by playing on fear and by indirect sabotage of all of the

Cab-Driver Sought As His Baby Lies Critically Ill

Police last night succesfully scoured the District for the father of a 17-month-old boy in serious condition in Children's Hospital. Doctors were unable to operate out the father's consent.

The child, Gordon Wieneke, jr., was rushed here from Vienna, Va., by his grandfather. His father, a cab driver here, did not know his son was in the hospital until found early today by police.

Mrs. Wieneke, police said, was ill at home and had been unable to accompany the baby, who is suffering from a hernia ailment.

Talmadge Holds Lead In Georgia

Atlanta, Sept. 11 (AP).—A flood of farm votes washed the Democratic nomination close to Eugene Talmadge's hands tonight in his bid for a third term as Georgia's chief executive.

Scattered but apparently representative returns from today's primary indicated rural indorsement for the former Governor and he carried into the urban counting a tentative hold on more than enough county unit votes to win without a runover.

In runner-up position was Agriculture Commissioner Columbus Roberts, while Athens Attorney Abit Nix ran far behind in the three-man race.

Complete, unofficial returns from 1,227 precincts of 1,720 gave the one-time New Deal foe 109,904 popular votes; Roberts, 87,643, and Nix,

Ford Indorses Willkie After Talk With Him

Strongly Impressed By Nominee's Plea for Tolerance

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 11.—Henry Ford formally indorsed Wendell L. Willkie today, declaring "I am completely satisfied that he means to do exactly what he says and is competent to do it without evasion or excuse."

In a written press statement, Ford spoke of the Republican Presidential nominee as a "businessman" who "understands what this country needs first and needs most."

The automobile manufacturer visited Willkie at Rushville, Ind., Monday but waited until he returned to Detroit to make public his statement. Ford indorsed Herbert Hoover in 1932 and Alf M. Landon in 1936.

Ford said he was strongly impressed by Willkie's disapproval of all forms of intolerance expressed in his acceptance speech.

"Mr. Willkie believes there is no room in America for class discrimination, and I am certain he will be a great influence for real national unity," the motor magnate said.

Third Term Issue Stressed

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 11 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie asserted today President Roosevelt and his associates have concentrated in Washington "a line of force that should be broken" through rejection of a third term.

The Republican Presidential nominee joined Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, in telling reporters the third term question "is one of the greatest issues of the campaign."

"It is not alone the continuation in office of Franklin D. Roosevelt," Willkie said, "but of a group in

400,000 Face First Call; Modified Plant Conscription Also Approved

Senate and House conferees reached a complete agreement on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill last night, fixing the age limits for registration and draft at 21 to 35, inclusive.

The final form of the controversial measure — unless upset by either House—also provides for elimination of the Fish amendment, which would have withheld the authority to draft pending a 60-day trial of voluntary enlistments.

Compromise Reached

Agreement was reached on a "draft industry" amendment, under which the Government could take over plants refusing defense orders only when the President declares the "public danger" to be "immediate, imminent and impending" and so acute that it could not resort to any other means of supply.

This limitation was added to the so-called Smith amendment adopted in the House, which provided for rental rather than outright acquisition of recalcitrant factories. It is designed, Chairman Sheppard of the Senate Military Affairs Committee said, to assure that the provision is constitutional. The language is taken from a Supreme Court decision upholding a similar 1917 act under such circumstances.

400,000 to Get First Call

Further, the conferees provided that if the owner is not satisfied with the compensation paid by the Government for use of his plant he may sue the United States for additional payment.

The age limits set by conferees, a compromise from the Senate and House versions, will require the registration of about 16,500,000 men.

Under the Senate bill, men 21 to 30, inclusive, would have been subject to the draft, while the House raised the upper limit to include men under 45.

LaGuardia Reveals Defense Board Plan; Each Nation to Use Bases of the Other

As the fate of the British Empire hung in the balance 3,000 miles away, a joint Canadian-American defense board here yesterday announced that plans have been laid for the "pooling of forces" of the two nations in the event of attack on the Western Hemisphere.

Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia, of New York, chairman of the American section of the permanent defense group set up last month, in making this announcement, said the United States would not acquire any sites for bases in Canada—other than the two in the British crown colony of Newfoundland previously announced—but that each nation would use the other's bases in case of attack.

"The plan provides the very best protection that each country can contribute," LaGuardia told reporters at the end of a three-day session of the board at the Army War College here.

Confer With Roosevelt

Each country will develop facilities for defense within its own borders. The plan contemplates the utilization of the bases and the pooling of the forces in the event of an attack on the Western Hemisphere."

Members of the board left immediately after conclusion of their meeting for a conference with President Roosevelt. It was announced that the military and naval members of the board will leave September 16 for the West Coast for a survey of "existing defense facilities." Defense establishments of both nations "in the northwest" will be inspected, it was said.

The next meeting of the board will be in Boston on October 2.

Both LaGuardia and Col. O. N. Biggar, chief of the Canadian delegation, declined to discuss details of the joint defense plan. The former indicated that the controversial St. Lawrence Waterway project was included in the board's discussions.

"That's Part of Defense"

"That's part of defense," he answered smilingly, when questioned on this score.

When a reporter noted that the board had been in session a day longer than contemplated and asked if this meant there were differences of opinion among the members, LaGuardia shook his head and held up two fingers, adding "we're just like that."

Senate Votes Latin-American Loans, 42-27

Measure to Combat Influence of Nazis Goes to Conference

By John B. Oakes

Designed in part to thwart Nazi inroads in South America, an Administration bill increasing the loan authority of the Export-Import Bank by $500,000,000 was approved by a 43-27 vote of the Senate yesterday.

The measure, which now goes to conference with the House, was indorsed by 40 Democrats, and Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, while a solid bloc of 16 Republicans plus 11 Democrats opposed it.

Outgrowth of a Presidential message to Congress July 22, the bill is intended to help develop the resources, stabilize the economies and provide for orderly marketing of the products of nations of the Western Hemisphere. Under its terms, the loans can be made to governments, banks or individuals.

Chairman Wagner of the Banking and Currency Committee, sponsor of the bill, clearly indicated to the Senate that a major objective is to forestall, by economic means, German efforts to gain a politica-economic foothold below the Rio Grande.

Contending that the loans would be a waste of money, the opposition also maintained that the bill was too broadly worded; gave too much power to the Federal Loan

R.A.F. Drops Bombs Near Hitler's Home

Attack Answers Dire Nazi Threat To Level London

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 12.—British night fliers in a 92-minute air raid early today dropped numerous incendiary bombs on Berlin and caused one factory fire.

Authorities stated the fire which started in a north side factory was extinguished with comparatively little loss.

Other bombs fell in the famed Tiergarten Park in mid-Berlin, a few blocks from Fuehrer Hitler's official residence.

The British planes apparently remained at a considerable height.

Antiaircraft artillery put up a vigorous defense, authorities saying a "curtain barrage" prevented most of the planes from reaching the central district of Berlin.

However, the humming of some motors was heard over downtown Berlin.

There were no reports of any dead or injured in Berlin but it was another night in which bombers killed and injured several in "a north German city."

[Taree waves of bombers participated, the United Press said. The first appeared to pass the edges of the city, and the second failed to reach the city limits.

[During the third wave lively antiaircraft fire occurred near the center of the city and plane motors could be heard at intervals.]

This latest attack on Berlin followed a Tuesday night raid which brought from authoritative Nazis the declaration that Germany intends to drop 10,000 planeloads of bombs daily on the London area.

This attack—one without parallel in all the world's history—would be carried out by 2,500 airplanes as-

German Guns, Bombs Pound Dover to Cover Convoys; R. A. F. and Warships Batter Ports 'Vital' to Invader

The War Today

EMBATTLED BRITAIN, warned by her Prime Minister that the long-threatened Nazi invasion may come this week, strikes hard by sea and air at German-held ports across the Channel, smashing at the ships and barges massed to carry Adolf Hitler's troops; German big guns and dive bombers emphasize Britain's fears with the biggest bombardment of the war on Dover.

LONDON'S "ARCHIES," the heavily reinforced antiaircraft batteries surrounding the battered capital, take the sting out of the Germans' fifth consecutive all-night raid, as the city counts more than 5,000 casualties of the previous four night raids, learns one bomb damaged Buckingham Palace.

BRITAIN'S OWN BOMBERS return once more to Berlin, defying German threats of reprisals by "10,000 plane loads of bombs" after Tuesday night's attack on the Nazi capital which showered incendiaries and explosives into the heart of the Wilhelmstrasse area.

Guns Scatter Bombers

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Sept. 12. The heaviest antiaircraft barrage in history destroyed two of the hundreds of German raiders converging on London last night and early today and limited to about 20 the bombs exploded on the city in the nine hours of the fifth consecutive all-night assault.

Reports of damage as dawn neared were small, and observations from a mid-town building showed few new scars on the face of the sleeping capital. One newspaper building was hit, but there were no casualties.

The bombs came down singly or in pairs, instead of the clusters—which characterized the first four massed night raids.

[DNB, official German news agency, reported Nazi warplanes successfully had bombed Liverpool and strategically important cities in southern England during the night, as well as London.]

One German plane was shot down in north London and its crew captured.

The stiffened British resistance in the face of German threats to dump 10,000 plane loads of bombs daily on the London area brought down another Nazi plane south of London.

Populace Heartened

The dusk-to-dawn attack, which was started by masses of Nazi planes, began to die down as the seventh hour approached. For half an hour, relays of single raiders flew at about 10-minute intervals over the metropolitan area.

Everywhere they were pursued by the heavy antiaircraft barrage, which indicated a sudden change in the tactics of the British defense.

The Air Ministry, giving an indication of the heavy toll exacted of the German raiders, reported that at least 90 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday in heavy resistance to the aerial invasion.

The sustained antiaircraft fire had a heartening effect on the civilian

Reich Makes Ready

London, Sept. 11.—German dive bombers and long-range guns united tonight in a heavy bombardment of the English coast to protect Nazi ships maneuvering in the Channel in apparent preparation for the now hourly expected attempt to invade Britain—but the British beat the offensive to the punch.

The Admiralty officially announced that light British naval forces in "strong and repeated offensive action . . . have inflicted losses" on Nazi shipping movements and ports which were "vital" to Adolf Hitler "in the event of an attempt to invade England."

"Further details," it was added, "cannot be given without disclosing information which would be useful to the enemy."

Dover Heavily Shelled

The Dover area trembled under the war's greatest shelling and bombing.

[At 8:30 p. m. (2:30 p. m., E. S. T.) the bombardment had been in progress five hours, the United Press said, with British heavy guns replying. Nazi dive bombers, in addition to attacking Dover and nearby artillery installations, bombed several small British ships in the Channel.]

British land guns made powerful retort; they centered their fire upon the German convoy in the Channel while swarms of British fighter planes, from both the Royal Air Force and the naval air arm, leaped up into the engagement.

They roared in force across the Channel and shortly the German guns fell silent after hours of intermittent shelling from emplacements on the Nazi-held French coast.

Reserves Called

Great columns of black smoke rose from the sea between Calais and Dunkerque, blotting out visibility from the English side.

Aloft, desperate action still went on around England's coast. Squadrons of yellow-nosed German Messerschmitt fighters, loosing their aerial cannon, hotly engaged the British.

The government called up all its reserves to meet the greater crisis of threatened invasion as Prime Minister Churchill told the nation that self-propelled German barges were moving by the hundreds to Nazi-held ports in coastal France; that German merchant ships in "tens and dozens" were moving in convoy through the Strait of Dover;

President's Signal to Call Down First Plane at Airport Tuesday

President Roosevelt will open Gravelly Point Airport, future national flying terminal of the United States, in ceremonies Tuesday, the White House announced yesterday.

The Chief Executive will give the radio signal that will bring the first airplane down on the bituminous macadam runways of the $10,000,000 field.

The President also will lay the cornerstone for Gravelly Point's administration building, nerve center of what is expected to be one of the Nation's busiest plane terminals.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, which has supervised the 22 months of construction, has arranged ceremonies in which District officials and civic organizations, commercial airlines, defense chiefs and Government notables will take part.

Feature of the early afternoon ceremonies, it was said, will be an address by the President. Some officials believed he might take the occasion to deliver a major speech.

Specially invited guests, headed by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Robert H. Hinckley, will board planes at the old Washington airport and circle over the new terminus until, at a signal from the President, they alight one by one on the field.

Participating in this ceremony, it is planned, will be one plane apiece from American Airlines, Eastern Airlines, Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Army and Navy.

Among those who have been invited are the members of the Senate and House Commerce Committees, which authorized the airport; members of the District Committees of both houses, the District Commissioners and representatives of Washington civil and trade groups.

Also invited were the two Virginia Senators, Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd; Representatives Howard Smith and Clifton Woodrum, of Virginia; the Undersecretaries of War and Navy; Defense Commission Members William S. Knudsen and Edward R. Stettinius; Postmaster General Walker and Second Assistant Postmaster General Ambrose O'Connell, and representatives of all the Government agencies that have had a hand in building the "dream airport."

The airport will be dedicated formally December 17, the anniversary of the Wright brothers' first flight. Regular commercial flights will begin the following day.

Borden Harriman Dies In Plunge at Philadelphia

Borden Harriman, 34, of Silver Spring, Md., member of America's famous banking and railroad-building family and nephew of the U. S. Minister to Norway plunged to his death yesterday from a window of his eighth-floor room in the Philadelphia Central Y. M. C. A., the Associated Press reported.

Harriman's family confirmed tentative identifications by Philadelphia police, and said he had left Washington five days ago for New York, apparently in good health.

In the room police found this note:

"God's earth is kindlier than some men know."

In the pockets of Harriman's crumpled blue serge suit they found 73 cents, four keys and an engraved visiting card.

There was a letter in the room from the young man's mother, Mrs. Grace Carley Harriman. She had written:

"I have no money to send you. Suggest that you come home."

The message was framed in black, for on August 14 Mrs. Harriman's husband, Oliver, 77, died at their country place, 701 Woodside Parkway, Silver Spring, Md. The elder Harriman long had been prominent in New York financial circles. A broker, he was a brother-in-law of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who returned to the United States recently from her legation in Nazi-conquered Oslo.

The Oliver Harriman will mentioned his son, Borden, but left no bequest, saying "adequate arrangements" had been made for him elsewhere. The residue of the estate is left to the widow, except for some personal belongings bequeathed to two other sons, Oliver Carley and John.

Churchill Declares Invasion Cannot Long Be Delayed

By Edward Angly

London, Sept. 11.—Between the daylight and the night bombardment of London, Prime Minister Churchill broadcast this evening a rallying call full of stern confidence in Britain's ability to meet not only the present ordeal, but the attempted invasion of German troops which he warned may be at hand.

In simple words which burned into the ears of millions of his countrymen, the eloquent Prime Minister told his people the Germans had moved hundreds of self-propelled barges down the coast of Europe from their harbors and those of Holland, to the ports of northern France from Dunkerque to Brest and even below Brest to the Bay of Biscay.

This revelation probably marked the first time in the history of conflict that the commander of one warring land had told his people what he knew of the immediate movements of his enemy. From his gripping words came the harsh fact that the Germans, under cover of their big guns along the French coast, control the Straits of Dover sufficiently to move ships along their side of the Channel which is still called English.

In addition to the convoys of merchant ships slipping through the Straits, Churchill said, several hundred self-propelled barges were moving down the coast of Europe from German and Dutch harbors to ports in France, ready to take on waiting Nazi troops. Similar preparations were going on in Norway.

"We cannot tell when they will that clearly a "heavy, full-scale invasion of this island is being prepared."

The next week, he said, might bring the hour of the decision.

Just after he spoke, the air ministry announced that British aircraft already were in mighty action against these barges and against the German bases of invasion.

Last night and early today, said the ministry, British planes bombed barge concentrations all along the German-held French, Belgian and Dutch coasts; poured explosives on nests of Nazi artillery across the Channel; smashed for three hours at the Calais docks; punished Ostend Harbor for eight consecutive hours; heavily bombed Avant and Boulogne.

Too, it was announced that two Nazi "E-boats," fast vicious little torpedoboats of the sort that would be used in any attempt to cross the Channel with soldiers, were believed sunk in an attack on the ports of Calais and Dieppe.

Fires Left Behind

Everywhere these far-ranging assaults were driven home through the mists and rains of early fall; nearly everywhere ragged trails of fire were reported left when the British at last had finished.

Late tonight a rescue squad of soldiers, sailors, air raid precautions workers and police worked to free an undetermined number of persons entombed under the wreckage caused by the artillery shelling of Dover. There were three known casualties from shells.

Earlier the air ministry claimed the vital Potsdam Station, one of the main railway termini of Berlin, had been the target of direct hits followed by fires in Tuesday night's spectacular bombing of the German capital.

It also reported attacks on the Focke-Wulf airplane factory and docks at Bremen.

Barges Raided Again

Describing operations designed to grapple with Nazi invasion preparations, the air ministry news service said:

"Another series of raids on the concentrations of barges and other ships lurking in harbors and docks along the French, Belgian and Dutch coasts was delivered in bad weather by the R. A. F. Tuesday night.

"The Calais docks bore the brunt of one of the heaviest attacks. The first salvos were released over the harbor as dusk was falling. For the next three hours the dock, basins and shipping were heavily pounded.

"As high explosives poured into the packed vessels, which lined the whole east side of the basin and extended three-quarters of the way across it, chunks of debris were flung into the air.

"Fires began and explosions were going on as the aircraft left.

Ostend Bombed 8 Hours

"Ostend harbor was bombed from 9 o'clock Tuesday night until nearly 5 o'clock this morning. As at Calais, an intense barrage and thick clouds and mist failed to balk the raiders.

"Repeatedly sticks of heavy bombs straddled barges lying in the Avant port. The ships were directly hit by a strong section of raiders which attacked the harbor just before midnight and between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning. Heavy explosions in the dock area followed an attack by another wave of bombers. Enemy ships in Boulogne harbor were also bombed."

"Merchant vessels and E-boats at Dieppe were also attacked, despite heavy ground fire and a protecting patrol of Messerschmitt fighters. After the bomb explosions two of six E-boats had vanished and it is believed they were sunk."

Invasion Can't Be Put Off—Churchill

try to come," he said. "We cannot be sure that in fact they will try at all. But no one should blind himself to the fact that a heavy, full scale invasion of this island is being prepared with all the usual German thoroughness and method and that it may be launched at any time now upon England, upon Scotland, or upon Ireland, or upon all three."

If the invasion is to come it would not seem that "it can long be put off," Churchill argued, first because of the weather, second because of the Nazi transports are being bombed each night by British aircraft and are sometimes shelled by warships waiting for them outside the range of German land batteries.

"Bred to Value Freedom"

Churchill, after making public some of his knowledge as to what the Germans are up to, told the British people that they must regard the next week as one of the most important in all their history.

What is happening now, he said, is on a far greater scale than what happened in the days of Nelson and of Drake, and he added that what is happening now is of "far more consequence of the life and future of the world and its civilization than those brave old days of the past."

Rallying his people with the words that they had been "bred to value freedom far above their lives," he told them that "this is the time for everyone to stand together and hold firm as they are doing."

In the course of the broadcast the pungent tongue of the prime minister poured eloquent damnation upon Adolf Hitler. It was no such screaming fulmination as Hitler flung at Eduard Benes on a hot summer day when the Nazis were coldly preparing to annihilate Czecho-Slovakia. Churchill's denunciation was delivered with a freezing, studied calm.

It came just after he had remarked that "these cruel, wanton, indiscriminate bombings of London are of course a part of Hitler's invasion plans.

Early in the afternoon Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information, told a luncheon gathering that the British must not be willing to discuss specious peace terms with Hitler should he make them, when it had been proved to his satisfaction that he could not conquer this island, destroy all its homes, take all of its lives. He urged those who survived this ordeal to remember that they would have to go on fighting for something more precious than life—go on fighting for liberty, not only their own liberty, but for "the liberty of all men who desire to be free."

Two U. S. Newsmen Injured As Bombs Pock-Mark Dover

Dover, England, Sept. 11 (U.P.).—German "big Berthas" and dive bombers caused a number of casualties in Dover late today, including a few dead and the injury of two newspapermen employed by the Chicago Tribune. They were Guy Murchie and Stanley Johnson, an Australian.

Whitelaw Reid, correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune and son of Ogden Reid, had a narrow escape from a close bomb. Murchie and Johnson were injured when a bomb struck and shattered a building from which they were watching the bombardment.

The casualties were believed to be the first among American newspaper correspondents covering the battle of Britain.

London, Sept. 11.—A Hurricane pilot, wounded by Nazi machine gun fire over the English Channel, was tossed out of his plane, plummeted 12,000 feet through space with unopened parachute, was fired on by a German airman and lived to tell the story today.

"I had just gone through some clouds at 20,000 feet when my Hurricane was hit by what felt like a tornado," he told reporters. "I felt a pain in my right side, felt the engine stop and heard hissing noises and smelled fumes.

"The next thing I remember was falling through air at high speed and feeling my helmet, flying boots and socks torn off. The lack of oxygen must have dulled my senses, as the combat ended at 19,000 feet and my parachute opened at 7,000 feet.

"At about 5,000, between two layers of clouds, the Messerschmitt fired at me while being closely chased by Hurricanes."

Hop Workers' Homes Destroyed

Cockneys whose homes have been smashed by German bombs are arriving by truckloads in the hop fields of Kent, where they are helping to gather the nation's hop crop, thereby saving it from wasting on the vines.

Even in their new rural homes—huts made of sheet metal and beaverboard—these doughty Londoners have been pursued by the Nazis.

Anarchy Spreads Through Rumania

Antonescu Taking 'Most Drastic Steps' Against Movement

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Sept. 11.—Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's military dictator, announced over the radio tonight that an anarchist movement had spread throughout the country and that he was taking the most drastic steps to crush it.

A government spokesman denied reports that 23 secret police had been slain by members of the Iron Guard.

Antonescu made no direct reference to the Iron Guard, but it was said that his warning was directed especially at that green-shirted organization.

Although Antonescu had issued a decree against any public demonstrations, an Iron Guard leader said the organization was planning a great three-day manifestation, beginning Friday—the birthday of the slain Guardist Corneliu Codreanu—in memory of thousands of its members executed during the regime of the deposed King Carol.

Too, while Antonescu had banned all uniforms, Iron Guardists paraded the streets tonight in bright tunics and Sam Browne belts and many women appeared in similar costume.

The Iron Guard has been relatively quiet since its outbreaks immediately preceding Carol's abdication.

But the organization has become restive since it became apparent that Gen. Antonescu had no intention of turning over important posts to its members.

However, release from prison of a number of Iron Guardists convicted of plotting against Carol was ordered by young King Mihai in what was regarded as an attempt to placate the nationalistic organization.

Ten thousand posters signed by Antonescu appeared in stores and on the walls of Bucharest, appealing directly to the Iron Guard, which is blamed for recurring disturbances:

"Forget the desire for vengeance . . . the peasants are starving . . . choose between work and anarchy . . . I came to power without any organization . . . I came alone. You must give me time to form a plan of action. It may take days. It is a difficult job. I don't sleep. I don't amuse myself. And if anyone can do a better job I will not hesitate to give him my place."

Heads for Portugal

Perpignan, France, Sept. 11 (AP).—The train bearing former King Carol of Rumania from Switzerland to Portugal arrived here at 6:40 p. m. (12:40 p. m., E. S. T.) today, and departed 26 minutes later for the Spanish border.

Palace Bombed, King, Queen Cheer Others

Take Tea With Poor Folk in Shelter, Comfort Bereaved

London, Sept. 11 (AP).—The British let it be known today that a Nazi time bomb had blown away a corner of the north front of massive Buckingham Palace, but even while the disclosure was made, England's young king and queen were daring new bombs in a poor section of their capital, earnestly doing their part to keep Britain's chin up.

The King and Queen were not in the palace, their only London residence, either when the bomb hit Sunday night or when it exploded yesterday.

Only household staff members were there when the bomb landed, an attendant said, and they were in air raid shelters. There were no casualties from the fall of the missile or its explosion which dug a crater 15 feet deep and 35 feet wide two days later.

The King knew that the bomb had landed even before it went off. He returned from Windsor Castle Monday in the interim between the hit and the explosion. He and the Queen had continued their tours of bombed areas, knowing the time-fused missile lay buried in the grounds of the century-old palace.

On tour today they paused between "take cover" and "all clear" in a southeast London air raid shelter.

When the sirens howled Their Majesties left their car and walked downstairs, under a police station, and for more than 10 minutes their presence helped illustrate the class-leveling that comes with bombs.

In the bleak half-light of the cavern Their Majesties sat on hard wooden chairs in the center of the room, ringed by a company of 30 which included overalled air raid precautions workers smeared with the dust of a shattered courthouse next door, policemen, court officials and white-garbed women of the police canteen.

The King was in field marshal's uniform, and the Queen in a two-piece suit of almond biege.

The King leaned back, crossed his legs and lit a cigarette. The Queen smiled all about and a canteen woman bustled nervously to make tea. The tea was still steeping when "all clear" sounded.

"I'm going to wait for some of that tea," said the King.

They sipped it from heavy cups marked "Police Canteen."

"This is delicious," exclaimed the Queen. "I should never have thought you could produce tea so soon."

The canteen woman beamed proudly.

The royal tour continued. The Queen talked sympathetically with bereaved women. Dust gathered on her shoes and stockings as she clambered over piles of rubbish.

Attackers Driven Off In Storm of Shells From Antiaircraft

Twice the German planes approached the city in massed formation ready to deal death and destruction and each time the thunderous barrage, fired with the aid of only a few searchlights, scattered the Germans.

Once the diminishing drone of many planes indicated a heavy squadron of Germans had withdrawn without dropping a bomb.

To the civilians huddled in shelters, the iron clamor of the guns gave assurance that London's defenses were offering what seemed to be an adequate answer to the night-flying terror, which in the four previous raids left more than 5,000 casualties and wrecked or damaged innumerable buildings—among them Buckingham palace, London residence of the King and Queen.

[The technique of air defense of London has been altered, A. G. MacDonell, British writer, reported in a broadcast from London picked up by C. B. S. in New York.

[MacDonell said the change was adopted for "a technical reason." He added that new batteries were in action at different points and that the guns kept up their barrage instead of trying to find the Nazis before aiming at them.]

[With a shattering and almost instant a single plane, or a group of planes, was heard. Their booming was so heavy that many at first thought bombs were falling.

It was a clear moonlight night; shells broke into red constellations against the background of the stars.

Raid Is Tremendous

The extraordinary intensity of the barrage made it evident that this was a raid of great proportions—perhaps greater than any yet loosed upon London. There were so many planes that at times their motor noise could be heard above the roar of the guns. Now and then an appalling crash indicated that a whole stick of bombs—six in a series—had been dropped.

As the noise grew ever higher, the rolling thud of bombs could be heard to the north. A thick barrage hung in the sky in front of seven planes.

There was a shrill whine of a diving plane and shortly afterward so many planes were aloft that their roar rose above the sound of the guns.

A blue light swept across the horizon. There was a vivid splash of light in midair—a tearing, rending sound, a fierce whining and a great crash followed by three or four smaller explosions. This noise might have come from a plane bursting apart in the sky.

London's searchlights gleamed suddenly and soon a dozen of them were fingering the sky in search of raiders. There was no letup in the antiaircraft barrage; a ton of metal was being thrown into the air every ten minutes.

43 Shells a Minute

At the height of the burst 43 separate gun reports were heard in one minute.

The gunners, favored at last by good weather, were shoveling shells into their guns and putting up an unbroken curtain of steel.

Explosives thudded in one London area just at dusk as the Germans opened their "revenge" attack—the fourth since morning—at 8:36 p. m. (2:36 p. m., Eastern standard time).

The alarm ended exactly nine hours later at 5:36 a. m. (11:36 p. m. Wednesday, E. S. T.).

It was officially stated that the great aerial siege of London beginning last Saturday already had killed 1,010 and wounded 4,300—and these figures were inclusive only through Tuesday.

Most of those killed Monday night were among the 500 persons taking shelter in an east side grade school which was demolished by a great bomb. Workers still were digging in the wreckage of this structure today.

The air ministry announced, meanwhile, that up to 7:30 p. m. (1:30 p. m., E. S. T.), 73 German planes had been destroyed. Seventeen British fighting planes were acknowledged as lost, but it was said that the pilots of three were safe.

Antiaircraft fire so heavy that its mere concussion was terrifying still kept the raiders high above the city.

Taxicabs broke all traffic rules: They tore through the dark streets without lights, their drivers anxious only to get home to shelter.

Wednesday was like any other day of this tragic week. Three times before dark the air-raid sirens had shrieked their warnings that German planes were aloft. British fighters drove them off each time as hundreds of civilians accepted the peril of standing outside to cry out encouragement to the pilots. Bombs fell in the already sorely hit suburbs; the roar of falling explosives could be heard from the southwest and southeast parts of the city.

As night came on, thousands of the city's people—men and women and children—went by habit into the raid shelters, taking their coats, their rugs, their baskets of food, ready for what had come every night in the last four—long, heavy assaults from the skies.

In spite of the unending punishment of this city from the sky, it appeared that London's adults would stay here to see it through.

Senate Group Reports Out Profits Tax Bill, 14 to 7

Objections Raised By Treasury Overriden, 14 to 7

Overriding specific objections of the Treasury Department, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday agreed by vote of 14 to 7 to report out the bitterly disputed excess profits tax bill.

The committee recorded its two-to-one approval of the measure at the close of a reportedly stormy executive session at which Secretary Morgenthau presented the Treasury's arguments against the present form of the excess profits tax feature of the bill.

Nonetheless, Chairman Harrison of the committee predicted last night that when the complicated measure reaches the Senate floor tomorrow, "there won't be much difficulty" in passing it. Majority Leader Barkley said he favored it.

As it was approved by the House, the measure had the indorsement of the Treasury; but it underwent major revisions at the hands of the Senate committee last week. Treasury opposition to these changes reached their climax yesterday when Assistant Secretary John L. Sullivan is understood to have informed the committee that the department could not indorse the bill.

Morgenthau Called

Chairman Harrison promptly asked Secretary Morgenthau to appear before the committee in the afternoon. It was reported the Secretary, fresh from lunch at the White House, had to listen to severe criticism of the department's attitude from committee members.

The sections of the bill that provide for five-year amortization of new plant facilities built for national defense and suspension of profit limitations on ship and aircraft contracts received the department's indorsement.

But the Treasury—in a report the Secretary presented to the committee—sharply disapproved of the bill's method of levying excess profits taxes. Under the Department's estimate, the bill will yield for the current year only $355,000,000 gross. On the other hand, Congressional experts estimated the yield at $482,500,000.

According to the Treasury figures, the excess profits levy will yield only $115,000,000, and the 3.1 per cent increase in the normal corporation tax will make up the remaining $240,000,000. Because of the adverse effect the tax will have on other sources of income, the net yield is estimated at $305,000,000.

Experts' Estimates

But the Congressional experts calculated the yield from the excess profits tax at $250,000,000, from normal tax increase at $232,000,000, and net yield at $432,000,000. It was estimated that a selected list of 27 corporations alone would pay $102,000,000 in excess profits taxes this year.

For 1941, the Congressional experts estimated a gross yield of $882,000,000, but Senator Harrison said he thought it would reach $1,000,000,000.

As the bill now stands, excess profits of the taxpaying corporation will be calculated either by comparing income for the taxable year with average income for the four-year base period, 1936-39, or by comparing ratio of earnings to invested capital for the taxable year, to that for the base period. However, if the taxable year's earnings do not exceed 8 per cent of invested capital, no excess profits tax would be paid.

During the weeks of laborious work on the bill in House and Senate committees, the Treasury has been urging the "invested capital" method as against the "average income" method, on the grounds that the latter would permit many large income corporations to escape.

Special penalties, consequently, were recommended for those corporations choosing the "average earnings" method. The House approved these penalties, but after the Senate committee knocked them out, the Treasury decided to withdraw its support of the bill.

It is understood that the Treasury also did not approve of the 3.1 per cent increase in the normal corporation tax, which the Senate committee added to the bill in order to bolster its yield.

Last-minute changes approved by the committee yesterday included provisions for special treatment of the canning and fishing industries, and of certain cases where the taxpayer would have been penalized for "abnormalities" in income.

In this latter class were included payment of claims or judgments that have been pending over a year; payments under contracts requiring more than a year to execute, and amounts received from explorations or prospecting that extended over a year. In these cases, income on which the excess profits tax was payable would be spread over the entire period rather than concentrated in the one year of "abnormal" income.

Voting for the measure in its final form were Senators Harrison, King, George, Walsh, Barkley, Connally, Bailey, Byrd, Gerry, Guffey, Brown, Herring, Johnson (of Colorado), and Radcliffe (Democrats). Against it were Senators Clark, of Missouri (Democrat); LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Capper, Vandenberg, Townsend, Davis and Lodge (Republicans).

Gov. Talmadge's Lead Grows For Renomination in Georgia

22,213. Talmadge held the lead in 133 counties having 340 county unit votes; Roberts was ahead in 23 counties with 62 unit votes.

Talmadge, black-haired, sharp-spoken lawyer-farmer, in his second term as Governor in 1935-37 repeatedly attacked the New Deal and fought Mr. Roosevelt's renomination. He ran for the United States Senate in 1936 as an ardent anti-New Dealer and was beaten by Senator Richard B. Russell, jr., an Administration backer.

In 1938 he ran second to Senator Walter F. George when the President tried unsuccessfully to "purge"

EUGENE TALMADGE

George. In that campaign Talmadge soft-pedalled opposition to Mr. Roosevelt but didn't line up as an administration supporter.

Since then he's fired no verbal volleys at the New Deal, and at the start of this race pledged cooperation with the National Administration. In response to rivals' charges that he remained a secret foe of the President, he said, "I'll vote the straight Democratic ticket" in November.

[Seven of ten Georgia Congressmen had no opposition.

[First District—Hugh Peterson, incumbent, 6,715; Albert Cobb, 2,623.

[Eighth District—Braswell Deen, who resigned the post two years ago, 563; George Quinn, 503; John Gibson, 1,160; Emory Bass, 1,210; J. J. Brown, 102.

[Ninth District—B. Frank Whelchel, incumbent, 2,819; Herman Delaperriere, 1,350; J. S. Golden, 1,260; Fred Kelley, 1,016.]

Incumbents Fare Well in 8 Primaries

House members in general fared well in Tuesday's primary elections in eight States, practically complete returns yesterday revealed.

Michigan's 17 House incumbents, 12 Republicans and 5 Democrats, all were renominated.

In Minnesota, Representative John Grant Alexander, of the Third District, lost the Republican nomination to Richard Gale, farmer, but the eight other sitting members won.

New Hampshire's Representatives A. B. Jenks and Foster Stearns won again by wide margins.

Out in Washington State, Representative Mon C. Wallgren won the Democratic nomination to succeed the retiring Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach, and his five House colleagues from the State were renominated.

Representative John R. Murdock, Democrat, won again in Arizona.

The three Democratic Representatives from Colorado were unopposed.

Chief primary casualties among House members were those in Louisiana, where Gov. Sam Jones sought to eliminate the entire State contingent, charging the members were followers of the "Long machine." The Associated Press reported four incumbents defeated, one renominated and two forced into runoff primaries.

Nominated were F. Edward Hebert and T. Hale Boggs in the First and Second (New Orleans) districts, State Representative James Domengeaux in the Third, and former Congressman J. Y. Sanders in the Sixth District, all active Jones supporters. Vance Plauche was named in the Seventh without opposition.

Representative A. Leonard Allen, in the Eighth District, was the only incumbent who held his seat. Representative Overton Brooks, in the Fourth, and Representative Newt Mills in the Fifth face runoffs.

Defeat of Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, was a highlight of Tuesday's balloting. Three other Senators won renomination handily. They were Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican; Hendrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farm-Laborite, who ran as a Republican, and Warren R. Austin, Vermont Republican, who was unopposed.

Other principal developments were:

Arizona—Gov. Bob Jones, seeking renomination on the Democratic ticket, was defeated by Sidney P. Osborn, Phoenix publisher.

Michigan—Republican Gov. Luren D. Dickinson won renomination for Governor. Murray D. Van Wagoner, State highway commissioner, was the Democratic choice. Vandenberg's Senatorial opponent will be Frank Fitzgerald, Detroit Democrat.

Minnesota—Gov. Harold Stassen, Republican, was renominated for Governor. His opponents in the general election will be former Gov. Hjalmar Petersen, Farmer-Laborite, and probably Ed Murphy, St. Paul attorney, who was leading the Democratic contest. Shipstead's opponents in the Senatorship race will be John E. Regan, Mankato Democrat, and former Senator Elmer A. Benson, Farmer-Laborite.

Ashurst Gay As He Bids Senate Adieu

Opposition to Draft Given as One Reason For His Defeat

Senator Henry Fountain Ashurst, of Arizona, yesterday bade farewell to a Senate in which he has served since Arizona was a Territory in the same vein of philosophic gayety that has marked his colorful career.

The man who stage-directed the President's court plan fight, who loved to boast of his political inconsistency, and who gave Kingfish Huey Long the worst dressing down he ever received in the Senate, was defeated in Arizona's Tuesday primaries after 28 years of Senate service.

In a speech mingling sorrow at departure and advice to colleagues with affected joy at relief from petty patronage cares, the 65-year-old Senator (66 tomorrow) congratulated Judge Ernest W. McFarland who beat him and offered to campaign for McFarland if needed.

As follows, he described the sensations of defeat:

"The first half hour you imagine that earth has slipped from beneath your feet, and that the stars above your head have paled and faded, and in your heart you wonder what the Senate will do without you and how the country will get along without you. But within another hour there comes a peace and joy to be envied by the world's greatest philosopher."

Ashurst said that how far his opposition to the conscription bill contributed to his defeat he did not know and did not care. He said no man should enter the Senate who was not prepared to surrender his political life for a principle.

He told the Senate he believed America in no great danger and that "America will survive in spite of all that dictators may do."

"America does not belong to the past as some pessimists would have us believe," he said. "I, for one, decline to believe that we are losing as a Nation or as a people any of our vital inspiration. I believe that we are still clinging and will continue to cling to the sterner virtues that made America great and strong."

Off the floor, the Senator told friends that the court plan was not a factor in his defeat, that his conscription bill vote was partly contributory, and that his opponent had attacked him particularly for staying too long in Washington and returning too seldom to Arizona.

Ashurst is the fifth Senator to be defeated in recent primaries. Those previously defeated were Senators King, of Utah; Burke, of Nebraska, and Holt, of West Virginia, all Democrats, and Frazier, (Republican), North Dakota.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, frequent critic of the New Deal, may succeed Ashurst as chairman of the Judiciary Committee. Senator Neely, next ranking member, is running for the governorship of West Virginia. McCarran is next in line for the post.

Political Arena

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 11 (AP).—Ernest T. Weir, of Pittsburgh, finance chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today: "We expect to break all former records in the number of contributions" to the G. O. P. fund.

Weir, in Albany to confer with party leaders of Albany, Rensselaer and Schenectady counties, asserted "we are appealing to everyone who favors the Willkie - McNary ticket and that includes a great many Democrats. We are getting many contributions from the Southern States, which are always Democratic.

WEIR

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, National Democratic chairman, said today he wanted to know from Wendell L. Willkie "how he is going to explain that he can't do anything with the members of his own party in the event of his election when he can't do anything with them before election."

"Practically all of his party are voting in Congress against what Mr. Willkie announces he is for," said Flynn at a press conference.

Flynn referred particularly to the Willkie-opposed Fish amendment to the military conscription bill which sought to postpone its operation for 60 days.

"Joe Martin (Republican minority leader in the House and National Republican chairman) votes against everything that Mr. Willkie is for," Flynn said.

Joseph Wolf, one-time Democratic national committeeman, predicted after a White House visit yesterday that the Chief Executive would carry Minnesota in the November election by a majority of 100,000 to 150,000 votes. He said Mr. Roosevelt won the State by more than 200,000 in 1936.

The nomination of Senator Shipstead by the Republican Party, Wolf said, probably will have some effect on the Democratic vote, since the Senator always was considered a liberal.

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—President Homer Mat Adams, of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, announced today a national rally of Young Democrats would be held in Miami, Fla., September 26, 27 and 28.

Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, will address the meeting on September 27 and the principal speaker will be chosen later.

U. S. Employment Service Finds Jobs For 260,000 in Month, Sets Record

By Edward Ryan

Private industry took 260,000 persons from the State employment office lists and placed them in jobs during July, Federal Security Administrator McNutt reported yesterday.

The number of jobs landed was a record for July, despite a normal drop in the number of placements that month, but the total was 10 per cent below the June record, the report said.

While the jobs increased, unemployment benefits rose, too, to a new monthly high of $55,700,000, McNutt said. He attributed this to normal season drop in some kinds of employment, along with an increase in the number of working days during July, and changes in unemployment benefit plans of some States.

The report said that at least 1,000,000 benefit checks were sent out during the month, and at the end of July, 5,500,000 men and women were registered as looking for work.

Advertising department—Government officials yesterday were on the trail of a large, once handsome, and now archaic sign board, with the idea of bringing it under cover pretty soon.

The sign, posted in the back yard of the public health building, says, PWA Federal Project, being constructed under the control of the Treasury Department, public buildings branch of the Procurement Division.

One clew to the sign's antiquity was the report that the public buildings branch of the Procurement Division had been taken out of the division and placed under the Federal Works Agency more than a year ago. A check-up showed that this happened July 1, 1939.

The building nearest the sign, the Public Health Service building, was finished in 1933, before the PWA. A quick survey showed not a PWA project in sight, anywhere, although the sign is within a few hundred feet of the North Interior Building, headquarters now for PWA.

Federal Works officials said that without probing the records, the safest explanation for the sign was that it went with a landscaping project for the Public eHalth Service. It was hinted that the landscape work might shortly be completed by removing the sign.

Langdon Post, once named as a possible candidate for United States Housing Administrator, has been assigned to take charge of the USHA's Western district, it was announced yesterday.

He will succeed Winters Haydock in charge of region No. 7 of the Housing Authority. He has been serving as assistant to Administrator Nathan Straus, and recently he has been inspecting the USHA defense housing projects and slum clearance work.

Post was head of the New York City Housing Authority when the USHA was set up, and he was listed among three or four persons who were considered for the job of organizing the new agency.

He will take over the Western district post October 1, and Haydock will come to Washington as aide to William P. Seaver, assistant to the administrator.

Jobs: The Civil Service Commission reported yesterday that exams have been opened for these jobs—Machinist, $7.48 to $8.44 a day, at the Naval Academy, Annapolis; torpedo ordnanceman, $6.24 to $7.20 a day, at the Naval Mine Depot, Yorktown, Pa.; aircraft mechanics, $7.48 to $8.44 a day, Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va.; machinists, $5.44 to $8.44 a day for jobs in and near Baltimore; ironworkers, boilermakers and sheet metal workers, $7.39 to $8.35 a day, for shipbuilding jobs at the Norfolk Navy Yard; boat builders, sailmakers, shipfitters and shipjoiners, $7.10 to $8.44 a day.

Indo-China Issue Reported Critical

Governor-General Cables Roosevelt Of Japan Demands

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Sept. 11.—Travelers from Indo-China reported today the situation there is most critical and that Governor-General Admiral Jean Decoux has sent three cablegrams to President Roosevelt pointing out the seriousness of the Japanese demands.

These demands were said to include:

1. Three airdromes in Tongking each accommodating a personnel of 8,000 men;
2. Free use of a naval base at Camranh Bay;
3. Passage of 60,000 troops through Tongking.

Among the many conflicting reports circulating in Indo-China, travelers said, were these:

First. That Admiral Decoux is holding out against the Japanese demands, but may give in owing to heavy pressure from the Vichy government in France, although the majority of the population favors the British-recognized "government of all free Frenchmen" headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Second. That Admiral Decoux has already agreed to yield three airdromes with 1,000 personnel each and the passage of 20,000 Japanese troops.

Third. That Gen. Tamagoko Nishinara called on Admiral Decoux at midnight with the Japanese demands, and that Decoux, who was in bed, replied:

"I am not getting up. If the Japanese want to declare war, they can do it tomorrow morning."

Hostilities Reported

Chungking, Sept. 11.—An outbreak of hostilities between Japanese and Chinese forces within French Indo-China was reported in an official Central News Dispatch from Kwangsi.

The dispatch said the Chinese are fighting 2,000 Japanese just over the Indo-China frontier from Yitien in Kwangsi. Whether the Japanese or the Chinese first violated the border was not revealed.

Senate Votes Loans For Latin America

Administrator, who would decide upon the loans; and might be used to develop South American agricultural products in competition with those of the United States.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, was defeated, 41 to 25, on an amendment to limit the added powers of the Export-Import Bank to loans only for the development of strategic materials or noncompetitive products.

Another amendment by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Massachusetts, to forbid lending more than $50,000,000 to any one country, was turned down by vote of 46 to 22.

The bill itself contains "not a word" regarding the struggle against Nazi activities in Latin America, said Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado. He suggested that the loans might be used to promote South American agricultural products.

With the observation that there is "greater danger from financial catastrophe than from foreign invasion," Senator Adams said these loans would be "only the beginning."

Opposing the placing of "control of commerce in the Western Hemisphere in the hands of any one man," he said this bill constituted "an abdication of Congressional authority."

Senator Taft expressed the fear that the loans might be used to hold surplus agricultural commodities off the market, which he termed a "most fantastic plan for wasting American money." The Ohioan foresaw "loss of money and of the very good will we are attempting to buy."

The Nation was advised by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, to meet German penetration of South America by "infiltrating" that continent with tourists, by exchanging scholars, and by counter-propaganda. He advocated creation of "one or two strong nations" in South America.

The Senate struck out of the House bill a provision increasing the lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by $1,000,000,000 for defense industries; and it added a special provision that none of the loans to Latin America should be in violation of the Johnson or Neutrality Acts.

SEC Warns Pepco Against Debt Financing

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday authorized the Potomac Electric Power Co. to sell privately $10,000,000 in first mortgage bonds, but at the same time warned the local utility against continuing to pay for improvements by debt financing.

The SEC's order cleared the way for Pepco to sell $10,000,000 of 3¼ per cent bonds, due in 1975, to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York.

The District Public Utilities Commission had approved the sale Friday following a joint hearing with the SEC August 28.

Shaking an official finger at Pepco, the SEC found that the utility had paid out in common stock dividends in 1938 and 1939 more than was justified by earnings.

Recent expansion and improvements in Pepco's property have been made "almost entirely through the incurrence of debt and the use of depreciation accruals," the commission said.

Ex-French Air Chief to Return For Trial as 'Point of Honor'

Guy La Chambre Tells Envoy Here He'll Leave Safety of U. S. to Face War Guilt Charges; Confident of His Vindication

Guy La Chambre, France's former air minister, revealed here last night that he will leave the safety of the United States to fly back to France to face war-guilt charges.

Emerging from a conference with French Ambassador Henri-Haye, the tall, dashing former cabinet member, who held the air post from January, 1938, to March, 1940, declared:

"It is a question of my honor. My conscience is clear. I will go back to face the trial, and I have every confidence in the justice of the court and my vindication."

First to Be Indicted

La Chambre and Pierre Cot, who succeeded him after the collapse of the Daladier ministry, were the first two leaders of the fallen republic to be indicted by the supreme court at Riom. They were named last Thursday, two days before the arrest of Daladier, former Premier Reynaud and Generalissimo Gamelin. Cot also is reported to be in the United States.

La Chambre, who arrived in Washington yesterday with his wife of two years, the former Paris music hall star, Cora Madou, said that he came to this country on private business at the end of July and was amazed to learn through newspaper reports last week that he was among those summoned to trial.

The former air minister, who is 42 but looks 30 and speaks English with an Oxford accent, said that "out of courtesy" he would reserve for the supreme court his explanation of France's war collapse, but added, briefly:

"I know how many planes we were turning out when I came to office, and how many when I left. The record will speak for itself.

'Two Years Too Late'

"The trouble was we were two years too late. All the countries of Europe were asleep. Germany began to build her air force in 1934, the British in part in 1935, but in France the popular hatred of war was so strong, and the people were so certain that war just could not come again, that our real effort in the air did not begin until 1938.

"War is not only a question of heroism, but in the same measure it is a question of material, tanks, planes and motorized equipment."

La Chambre, who saw two years of service in the World War, joined his artillery regiment as a captain last March and remained in service in the Maginot Line until the end of the war.

The former air minister said that he had complete confidence in Marshal Petain and insisted that despite the armistice limitations upon French freedom, the "French government is a French government, and not a German one."

"If this were not so," he added, "Marshal Petain would never have remained at the head of the French government. There is no question of Marshal Petain's patriotism. He had no other purpose in taking power than to serve his country.

"That is my purpose now in returning to France with my wife."

He was received by President Roosevelt at the White House Friday.

Mandel Taken to Prison

Vichy, France, Sept. 11 (AP).—Flanked by mobile guardsmen, former Interior Minister Georges Mandel, one of the bitterest anti-Nazi leaders of prewar France, today entered his castle prison near Chatel-Guyon where three others are awaiting trial in the Petain government's "war blame" cases.

Mandel was brought from Morocco to face trial along with former Premiers Paul Renaud and Edouard Daladier and former Generalissimo Maurice Gamelin, already confined to the Chateau de Chazeron.

New arrests also were announced of Aviation Officer Mendes France and Philippe de Rothschild, son of a member of the famous banking family, in charges of desertion, and the government's purge of "undesirables" gained headway when it became known the general housecleaning would extend to all press, literary, art and scientific groups in unoccupied France.

A committee of three was appointed to review the cases of individuals who were deprived of their citzienship for leaving France without permission between May 10 and June 30—the weeks of the German invasion.

Medical, pharmaceutical, dental and law professions are already on the list to be purged of all not attuned to the reform program of the Petain government. The right to practice also will be withdrawn from all who were not born of a French father.

Bombs Fall Near Hitler's Residence

signed to four trips a day to London, he said.

The informant, whose connections with Reichsmarshal Goering are very close, thus threatened an apocalypse of horror while official Germany stirred in cold fury at the spectacular Tuesday night raid on Berlin.

"I wouldn't give one farthing for the (British) Houses of Parliament," he said.

"Now that our Reichstag building has been bombed, there is no reason why we shouldn't bomb the British Parliament out of existence. If they try to hit the Chancellery (the official headquarters of Adolf Hitler), Buckingham or Windsor Castle will go as surely as you live."

Licked and Don't Know It

The British, he asserted, "are already licked and don't know it."

To a question whether the Nazis believed their air force alone could make Britain give in, he responded:

"When I last talked with the Reichsmarshal (Goering) he left that question open. It all depends on how well the British fight back. It is conceivable that England will collapse under the weight of our air force attacks, in which case invasion will be unnecessary. But we are prepared either way.

Almost at the same time2authorized sources said improved weather conditions had enabled big units of the German air force to head across the Channel Wednesday afternoon for new raids on London.

Six merchant ships and one destroyer received bomb hits and were set afire by a German bomber attack on a British convoy leaving the Thames under cover of approaching darkness last night, an authorized source said.

Convoy Forced Back

It was said that late reports indicated the burning freighters lay motionless and the remainder of the 20 ships in the convoy returned to the Thames Estuary.

DNB, the official German news agency, said incomplete reports of Wednesday's air fighting over southeast England indicated 54 British planes had been shot down, against the loss of 18 German machines.

Several hangars and the Spitfire Airplane works in Southampton were declared damaged by Nazi bombs. An intense bombardment of industrial plants and harbor facilities at the mouth of the Thames River also were reported.

(The Berlin radio reported that the first results of Wednesday evening's attacks on London were huge fires in the Victoria Docks on the Thames at the eastern edges of the city.)

British bombers, in the assault Tuesday night on the heart of Berlin, not only hit the Reichstag but their bombs struck the Academy of Arts, damaged the Brandenburg Gate in Unter den Linden and dented one section of the United States Embassy. At the embassy the damage, caused by a bomb fragment, was trivial.

DNB, official German news agency, said eight British planes which took part in the raid on Berlin were shot down by antiaircraft fire and fighting planes. Reports said six were brought down.

Two hospitals in the center of the city also were hit, the Nazi high command declared. A number of streets had to be cleared in fear of the collapse of damaged houses. Part of the garden of the embassy, right next door to the home of Goebbels, had to be closed today because of the suspected presence there of unexploded bombs.

Many British incendiary bombs fell, and it was officially acknowledged that only quick defense work prevented them "from causing bigger damage."

British bombers likewise raided objectives in German-held northern France and Belgium and in northern Germany, but it was officially insisted that they "caused but little damage."

(In London it was declared that British bombs made direct hits on the great Potsdam railway station in Berlin; this was denied in a broadcast by the official German wireless.)

For all this, a terrible retaliation was threatened.

German sources declared that London differed strategically from other capitals such as Berlin, asserting that military objectives practically were not distinguished from purely civilian sections.

For example, they said, in London munitions plants are surrounded by workers' dwellings; wooded areas like Hyde Park have been crisscrossed with trenches.

[These trenches, started during the 1938 Munich crisis, were designed as air-raid shelters.]

More French Ships Believed Joining British

Gibraltar Cannons Silent as 6 Vessels Steam Past

By the Associated Press

Ceuta, Morocco, Sept. 11.—Three cruisers, escorted by three destroyers, all flying the French flag, were reported heading for the Atlantic through the Straits of Gibraltar today, unmolested by British batteries at Gibraltar.

(This raises the possibility that some of the French fleet units refuged at Toulon have escaped and are joining the British.)

Rome, Sept. 11 (AP).—Italian warplanes bombed British troops along the Egyptian coast, the Italian high command announced today. The British were reported at the same time to have sent air raiders from Egypt across the frontier into Libya.

The high command reported 13 persons killed and 21 injured in the British raids on Bardia, Tobruk and Derna in northeastern Libya. Four British planes were said to have been shot down and two Italian planes were listed as missing.

Tel Aviv, Palestine, Sept. 11 (AP).—Rescue workers searched through the ruins of numerous homes today for additional bodies of victims of yesterday's bombings by Italian planes in which the list of known dead has reached 112 persons and the wounded 151.

The first official check showed there were 55 children among the dead.

A noted cellist, Joachim Stutchewsky, was among the wounded.

British officials reiterated a charge that the Italian bombing was "indiscriminate," declaring there are no military objectives within 30 miles of Tel Aviv.

Among those killed was Theodore Pehr, 41, listed as a naturalized United States citizen who arrived in Palestine in 1935.

Officials listed seven Arabs among the 112 recovered bodies. The others were Jews, many of whom, it was believed, formerly lived in the United States.

Ford Starts Work On Airplane Engine Plant

Detroit, Sept. 11 (AP).—Edsell Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., announced today that preliminary work on an $11,000,000 plant for the production of airplane engines had been started.

He said the plant, which would be completed in four months after contracts are let, is intended primarily for fulfillment of an Army order for 4,000 Pratt & Whitney 2,800-horsepower Double Wasp engines.

The plant will cost $4,000,000 to build and $7,000,000 to tool and equip, providing employment for 10,000 or more men.

The Army is seeking delivery of 15 engines a day. The total value of the Army order was estimated by Ford at about $80,000,000.

Meanwhile, officials of Chrysler corporation participated in groundbreaking ceremonies today for an Army ordnance plant for the manufacture of tanks. It will cost $20,000,000.

Lightning Studied As Crash Cause

Shattered Rifle Seen as Clew To Plane's Fate

The Civil Aeronautics Board learned for the first time yesterday exactly what happened to the lightning bolt that flashed through the downpour within less than two minutes of the crash of a Pennsylvania-Central airliner at Lovettsville, Va., August 31.

From this knowledge they were able to understand the probable nature of the bolt and from an expert on lightning they heard that such a stroke "might be quite severe" even at altitudes of 3,000 and 4,000 feet.

The terminal of the stroke was a .22 caliber rifle that hung on a wall in the garage of I. F. Baker, Morrisonville, Va., farm supervisor, whose home is three and one-quarter miles from the crash scene.

Bolts Travel Far

The expert, Dr. Carl B. McEachron, of the General Electric Co., Pittsfield, Mass., told the board that lightning strokes have been known to travel relatively great distances and asserted that a bolt was observed in New York City that flashed two miles before striking the ground.

The gun, with its scorched and splintered stock and its scarred barrel, was brought into the afternoon session of the board's public investigation of the worst commercial airliner crash in history.

Baker, its owner, will appear at today's hearing to tell how the bolt crashed across his barn and into the garage to score a hit on the weapon, and how, less than a minute and a half later, he heard the crash of the plane. Investigators, it was learned, have been able to determine by Baker's movements the lapse of time between the lightning flash and crash with possibility of error only a matter of seconds.

Closer to Bolt

Frederick M. Glass, board attorney and investigation chairman, brought out by questioning Dr. Eachron that because of the direction it was flying, the plane probably was closer to the lightning stroke than it was to the point of crash.

Dr. McEachron then told the board he believed the evidence of the shattered rifle important because it shows that there was a "cloud to ground stroke" at the time of the crash and that the plane "might have been in its path."

The implication of the evidence was directly opposed to the testimony of experts that the wreckage of the plane gave no evidence of lightning and that lightning never has been established as an air accident cause.

During his previous testimony in which he said he saw only a "remote possibility" of a strong shock, Dr. McEachron laid emphasis on the difference between lightning flashes from cloud and those that travel from sky to earth. He was quite sure, he said, that the former type of stroke would cause no material plane damage.

Asked by G. Grant Mason, jr., board member, about the possibility of a lightning stroke disrupting operation of the plane's automatic stabilizing equipment, Dr. McEachron testified he did not believe even a long stroke would set up magnetic disturbances sufficient "to stop any running object."

Earlier Dr. McEachron said that an airplane might be struck by lightning without "appreciable shock."

Louis P. Harrison, assistant meterologist of the Weather Bureau, testified to 100 recorded cases of planes being hit by lightning without a single fatality. He cited the instance of an Imperial Airways plane whose flight lightning failed to interrupt though its pilot was burned and his hair singed by the bolt.

E. R. Bayless, engine expert of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, testified that examination of the motor parts of the airliner wreckage failed to indicate any structural failure and that both engines were on the plane at the time of the crash.

Bearings Overheated

Joseph Palsulick, Wright project engineer, detailed evidence of overheating of master rod bearings found in scattered parts. He emphressed the belief that the overheating was caused by overloading which occurred "as the result of overspeeding of the engine rather than interruption of the oil supply." a motor speed in excess of 3,000 revolutions a minute would be required to overheat the bearings, he declared.

From examination of the plane's twisted and battered propeller parts and discovery of evidence indicating the angle of propeller blade pitch, C. F. Schory, United Aircraft expert, told the hearing he believed the propellers were turning at about 1,800 revolutions a minute at the time of impact.

He was able to find no propeller damage that could not be attributable to crash impact, he said.

Meanwhile, Loudoun County's concern in the disastrous crash was ended yesterday with an inquest at Leesburg, Va., after which Coroner John A. Gibson handed down a verdict holding the 25 persons were killed "as the result of an accident, cause unknown."

Dr. Gibson was assisted in pressing the probe by Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison. The story of the crash was told by men and women who saw and heard it happen.

Socialists Picket Major Parties

Two girls, representatives of the Socialist Party, yesterday picketed the headquarters of both the Republican and Democratic District organizations as Maynard C. Kreuger, Socialist candidate for the Vice Presidency, arrived in Washington to open his party's election campaign.

The picketing was provoked by the failure of the two major parties to supply speakers to debate Kreuger, it was announced. The girls marched with their placards before the G. O. P. headquarters at Fifteenth and H streets northwest and the Democratic headquarters in the National Press Building.

Kreuger will speak on the subject, "Who Threatens American Security," at 8:15 p. m. today at the Hamilton Hotel.

Rome, Sept. 11.—The Republican victory in the Maine electorial campaign has been greeted with pleasure in the Italian press and on the radio. Any defeat for President Roosevelt is considered here to be a good thing for the Axis, on the theory that Mr. Roosevelt is a known evil and Wendell L. Willkie at least a doubtful one.

Indeed, the Republican candidate is being built up for the Italian public as an isolationist. Everything he says tending toward that idea is prominently reproduced, but his statements in favor of England are ignored.

deferments and exemptions are made of men with dependents, those physically unfit or holding essential jobs in Government, agriculture and industry, about 5,000,000 men would be qualified for military service.

Of these, the Army plans to call up 400,000 this fall, a like number next spring and about 800,000 a year until 1944. The bill itself limits the number of draft men in the Army at one time to 900,000.

Senator Sheppard said committee clerks would prepare the text of the bill for report to both houses today and that adoption of the final draft of the measure would probably be voted on tomorrow.

Collegians Exempted

The agreement reached included a provision deferring the military service of any college student called until the end of the school term next June. It is applicable only during this year.

Other differences were settled by the conferees as follows:

A Senate provision that any person discharged from a job within 30 days prior to the passage of the act and is later drafted shall come within the reemployment guarantee provision was eliminated.

Language in the Senate bill giving the Department of Justice a voice in determining the legitimacy of demands for exemption by conscientious objectors was retained.

Jobs vacated by men called to colors should not be filled by Communists or members of the German-American bund, under a declaration of the measure, modifying a House amendment which had also barred aliens.

Provision for draftees to vote was added. Men near their homes would be granted a day's leave on election day, while others could send in absentee ballots if State laws permit.

Hershey May Get Post

Trial of "draft dodgers" or other violators of the act was divided between civil and military courts. Men already inducted into service would come before courts-martial, while those still civilians would be tried by Federal courts.

The clause providing for appointment of a director of selective service at $10,000 to supervise the draft was amended to permit the post to go to a military man. Col. Hershey, now in charge of the machinery for the draft, may receive the post.

Eliminated a Senate provision extending the 8 per cent profit limitation now applicable to shipbuilding to cover Army ordnance contracts. All such limitations would be suspended in favor of a general excess profits tax under the pending revenue bill.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, offered the amendment to the "draft industry" provision of the House bill. It would permit the Government to take over and rent plants refusing defense orders:

"If the public danger is immediate, imminent and imperative and the emergency in the public service is extreme and imperative, and such as will not admit of delay or a resort to any other source of supply, and is so declared by the President, and the circumstances are certified by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to imperatively require the exercise of power created hereby in respect of the property to be impressed or transformed or operated."

Austin said that without this limitation the voting of power to take over private property in peacetime might be held unconstitutional. Under a law already on the statute books, the President is authorized to take over any factory in time of war or "when war is imminent."

War Refugees, Turned Back, Sob as Ship Coals at Norfolk

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 11.—Eighty-nine disconsolate European refugees, blocked at Vera Cruz and New York in attempts to transfer to ships bound to South America, brought legal action along two lines here today to prevent their return to Lisbon aboard the Portuguese steamer Quanza.

The Quanza put in to take coal, and the women in the group of mixed nationality, some with children at their side, wept at the rail as they talked with friends and relatives gathered on the rain and windswept pier. Immigration officers kept the two groups apart.

Attorneys for the refugees swept into the United States District Court of Eastern Virginia with three different petitions for writs of habeas corpus before Judge Luther Way ordered Capt. A. Herberts to appear tomorrow to show cause why four individuals named in the petitions should not be allowed to leave the vessel.

Lack Proper Visas

The lack of acceptable transit visas stopped the passengers from landing at New York and the Mexican port. They said Mexican authorities at Vera Cruz refused to honor visas given them in Lisbon.

A libel action for $100,000 damages against the Quanza was filed by an attorney for a family of four aboard the ship. An obvious move to gain time here, papers filed with the Federal court charged failure of the Portuguese line to deliver Moritz Rand, 55, and members of his family to their destination. A deputy marshal attached the ship.

One passenger, a German who identified himself as Hilmar Wolff, tried to swim ashore in the darkness of last night. After a hard battle with current and surf he reached Old Point, but a guard at Fortress Monroe took him in tow and he was returned to the Quanza.

The steamer left Lisbon August 9. Most of the Dutch, French, Belgian, Czech, Polish, Hungarian and German passengers held passports for South America. After their rejection at Vera Cruz, the ship proceeded to New York to disembark those with American visas.

U. S. Weighs Case

The State Department was said at Washington to be considering the plight of the refugees, but no department action had been taken by tonight.

In the group left aboard when the steamer tied up here was a young matron who clutched two children to her and cried out to her husband on the pier: "I thought America was the land of the free."

Representatives of four American refugee aid societies said here that the refugees only needed transit visas to allow them to remain in the United States or in Mexico until a ship to South America could pick them up.

There were reports that some of the passengers were bringing all their wealth to the United States to intrust it to relatives here.

Schulte to Speak Today On Milk and on Seal

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, will make a 15-minute address in the House today on the District milk situation and on the retirement of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

Schulte asked for the time after calling attention to a newspaper story that Seal was resigning and would become general counsel of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

Men Who Flew Aid to Chile Will Get Medal Today

Officers and men of the Army Air Corps who flew medical supplies from Langley Field to Santiago, Chile, after the 1939 earthquake there, will be awarded the War Department's Mackay Trophy at ceremonies in Assistant Secretary of War Patterson's office today at 9 a. m.

The flight, called "the most meritorious of the year," was made on February 4, 5, and 6, 1939, at the request of the American Red Cross for the purpose of rushing 3,250 pounds of urgently needed vaccines and other medical supplies to devastated areas.

Loaded to maximum capacity, the XB-15, piloted by Maj. Caleb V. Haynes, took off from Langley Field, Va., before daylight and flew with night landings at Panama and Peru, to Santiago, landing on schedule.

Members of the flight crew have been widely separated since that time, but most of them expect to be in Washington today for the ceremony.

Autumn Days at The Homestead

IF you already know The Homestead, we need not tell you about it. We need only remind you of the pleasant Autumn days awaiting you in the Virginia Alleghanies.

Once here, you'll always remember the sports facilities, the wine-like mountain air, the social life, and the unequalled Southern service developed through a century of caring for America's first families.

Discover these things all over again, this season; you'll find them more charming than ever, The Homestead itself more surely than ever the traditional Autumn capital of the East.

Just let us know when to expect you; or, if you don't already know The Homestead, write us for literature, rates, and rail or motor routes. We'll send them at once.

House Passes Bill to Curb Fifth Column

Measure to Deny Citizenship to Aliens Tainted by 'Isms

By the Associated Press

Urged by President Roosevelt to act with "as little delay as possible," the House passed with a chorus of "ayes" yesterday legislation designed to help rout "Fifth Columnists" and prevent alien Communists, Nazis and Fascists from becoming United States citizens.

The measure, a proposed new nationality code, now goes to the Senate. Not one word of opposition was voiced in House debate.

Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the Rules Committee, placed in the Record a letter from Mr. Roosevelt, which said:

"I am informed that the opinion is entertained in some quarters that its enactment might serve to curb certain Fifth Column activities."

The measure, in the words of Representative Rees (Republican), Kansas, "drastically tightens" provisions regarding eligibility for naturalization. Explaining the bill to the House, he also said that it would withdraw citizenship from "thousands" of "nominal" citizens who have not been in this country in years.

It also would take away the citizenship of Americans who serve in the armed forces of another country, or vote in a foreign election.

New bars against naturalization would be set up against those who advocate or promote overthrow of the Government. Rees expressed belief that these provisions would prevent Communists, Nazis or Fascists from becoming citizens.

Bankhead Now Out of Danger

Baltimore, Sept. 11 (INS).—Although still in pain from a severe attack of sciatica, Speaker William B. Bankhead today was reported in a "satisfactory" condition.

He was pronounced out of danger by Dr. George W. Calver, official Congressional physician, after he had slept through the night under "heavy narcosis." Tallulah Bankhead, actress-daughter of the 66-year-old Alabama Legislator, remained at his bedside.

$1,000,000 Red Cross Aid To Go to Finns

Shipments to Start In Next Few Weeks, Davis Announces

Shipments of more than $1,000,000 of food, clothing and bedding will be made to Finland within the next few weeks to aid war victims there during the winter months, American Red Cross chairman, Norman H. Davis, announced yesterday.

Approximately 15,000 tons of food and some of the clothing will be purchased through the $50,000,000 Congressional appropriation to the Red Cross for war victims, Chairman Davis said.

The supplies will be shipped to Petsamo in Finnish boats from New York and Baltimore. Included will be ten motor trucks, to aid in hauling the shipments from Petasamo to the points of distribution, and a quantity of surgical dressings for the hospitals.

300,000 Finns Dependent

Clothing will inculde "a large quantity" of warm dresses, knitted garments and layettes made by women volunteers in American Red Cross chapters throughout the Nation.

Distribution in Finland will be under the direction of the Finnish Red Cross and A. K. Cajander, former prime minister and now president of the civilian relief organization, "Suomen Huolto." In a cablegram of thanks to Chairman Davis, Cajander said:

"Including families and invalids, there are a minimum of 300,000 (Finns) dependent on relief.

"The government is proceeding energetically in reconstruction work, but despite the utmost effort the coming winter period will find only temporary housing arrangements. In view of the approaching winter cold, the clothing situation is especially disturbing among the (480,000) evacuees, particularly in regard to warm underwear, stockings, footwear and children's garments. . . ."

Fund Oversubscribed

Meanwhile, National Red Cross headquarters here announced that the $20,000,000 war relief fund has been oversubscribed to the extent of nearly $1,000,000. Total receipts to date were given as $20,924,120, with additional sums being reported daily.

Chairman Davis yesterday expressed deep thanks to the war relief fund donors. He said their dollars had saved the lives of "several hundred thousand" French, Belgian and Dutch refugees in France.

"Today, he added, "these contributions are bringing vitally needed clothing, medicines and hospital care to the wounded and homeless in the British Isles."

The District ranked third in exceeding its goal, officials said.

Driver Held In Auto Death

Charles P. VanSmith, colored, 22, of 1807 Eighth street northwest, was held under the negligent homicide act by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death of William B. Betters, colored, 35, of 5509 Jay street northeast.

Betters was struck at Eckington place and Florida avenue northeast, last Saturday, and died two days later at Casualty Hospital.

Dog Recovering From Snake Bite

Beauty, the 2½-year-old collie dog who was badly bitten by a copperhead snake Sunday when she pounced upon the reptile as it was about to strike her master, was apparently well on the way to recovery last night.

Dr. Homer A. Dennewitz, veterinarian, said Beauty "is able to take nourishment and had lost that worried look." He predicted that the dog would be able to return home within a few days.

We've Gotten Used to Bombers, Young Veteran of Raids Says

Scot Who Came Over on Cameronia Tells How Bombs From Stukas Rocked School Sheltering 800 Children

Eight hundred children huddled behind their desks at a school in Tronn, Ayrshire, Scotland. From outside came the shriek of Stuka bombers. Then the building shuddered from bomb detonations.

This was the story told here yesterday by a 15-year-old Scottish youngster, one 200 boys and girls who fled Britain's war on the steamship Cameronia, which docked in New York Tuesday.

Garbed in kilts and school blazer, ruddy-cheeked Billy Wilson spoke hesitantly of the terror at home and the submarine scares on the ocean trip. Still strong were the inhibitions of censorship on the Isles.

To Live With Sister

"I can't talk about that," he muttered when questioned about the reported attempt of an Italian submarine to torpedo the Cameronia.

Reassured by his sister, Mrs. John Fischer, with whom he will live at 4505 Stanford street, Chevy Chase, Md., that there was no further reason for guarding the incident, he would say only that "in a certain place there was a lot of oil where a flying boat had fought the submarine."

At home "things aren't so bad, after all," the youngster declared. "We've gotten used to the bombers and there's enough of everything."

Mrs. Fischer remarked, however, that Billy's flight to this country would mean one less ration of the carefully guarded food supply for her family.

Ready for Junior High

Today his sister will see to the matter of enrolling him at Leland Junior High School and fitting his British education of foreign languages, "trig and technical," into an American public school curriculum.

On arrival here the youth was ready to take the Capital in stride. Before leaving Tronn he had prepared with research including the movie, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

Immediately on leaving the train at Union Station he asked to be driven to the "Dome."

But earlier on the train the Scottish youngster had been more guarded in accepting American customs. He had refused to buy a meal in the diner for fear that the sight of the money in his purse would bring an overcharge.

"Just the true Scotch caution," Mrs. Fischer explained.

War Mineral Outlook for U. S. Termed Bright

Detroit, Sept. 11 (AP).—The American Chemical Society today heard one of its leaders report that the United States can probably be self-sufficient in war in all the essential strategic minerals.

Dr. Fink

No other nation can say this. The inventiveness of America's metallurgists and chemists, said Dr. Colin G. Fink, of Columbia University, will piece out the Nation's rich resources at the spots where they are lacking.

As an example he cited tin, of which the country has none except a small amount in Alaska. The rest comes from the East Indies and South America. But aluminum is replacing tin for coating steel. He said that at Louisville, Ky., a manufacturing plant is turning out commercial aluminum-coated steel better and cheaper than tin plate.

Defense Commissioner Edward R. Stettinius, jr., announced yesterday a $40,000,000 expansion program in the Nation's heavy forging facilities.

Stettinius declared that the defense program required huge amounts of heavy forgings of various types for use in construction of battleships, cruisers, airplane carriers and other craft as well as for naval guns, heavy artillery, projectiles and shells.

He said the principal problem was to ascertain the location and capacity of existing facilities and the extent to which new facilities might be required.

As Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox appealed to the Nation yesterday to "keep the fleet strong," the Navy Department said that because of "present circumstances" the traditional Navy Day custom of allowing the public to visit naval vessels, navy yards and industrial plants would have to be cancelled this year.

In a Navy Day essage to the Navy League of the United Stetes, Knox declared "I am most firmly of the opinion that a strong navy is our best primary insurance of national security." He added that on Navy Day, October 27, an "indisputable message" should be carried to the contrary that we "should keep the Navy strong."

Army plans for leasing or buying 154,000 acres of ranch property owned by William Randolph Hearst in Monterey, Calif., were disclosed yesterday.

Representative Anderson (Republican), California, said the property had been offered to the War Department for $2,000,000, but that the Army preferred to acquire the acreage under a lease.

The land will be used as a training ground.

Albanians in Clash With Yugoslavs

Bitolj, Yugoslavia (At the Albanian Frontier), Sept. 11 (AP).—Border clashes between the Yugoslav army and Albanian irregulars were officially reported tonight. Defense Minister Gen. Milan Madie asserted that six Yugoslavs had been killed and many injured.

Unofficial reports said these skirmishes had been going on since May.

Rhea Is Confirmed As Land Bank Head

The Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of William E. Rhea, of Missouri, to be land bank commissioner in the Farm Credit Administration, succeeding Roy M. Green, resigned.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 Years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

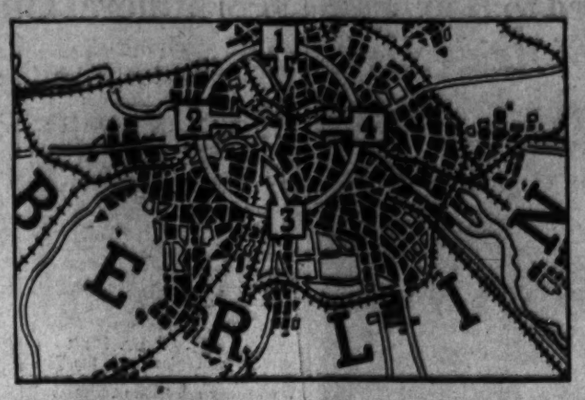
Nazis Bomb King's Palace

One corner of century-old Buckingham Palace, residence of the King and Queen of England was demolished Tuesday by a delayed-action bomb dropped during the Nazi air raids over London Sunday. The royal family was not in the palace at the time. Berlin announced yesterday that 2,500 planes making four trips daily would drop 10,000 loads of bombs on the British capital. A German informant said he wouldn't give "one farthing" now for the houses of Parliament (see map at left)



British Bomb Nazi Capital

Retaliating for the raids on London, Royal Air Force planes dropped demolition and incendiary bombs in the heart of Berlin, forcing evacuation of several streets. Berlin said the British raiders struck the Reichstag Building and damaged the famous Brandenberg Gate in Unter den Linden. Map of Berlin (left) locates the Reichstag Building (1), the Brandenberg Gate (2), the Potsdam Station, which British claimed to have damaged, but Germans denied it (3), and the Chancellery (4). Several fires were reported started in this area, in which is located the American Embassy and the home of Propaganda Minister Goebbels

Clothing for Europe's War Victims

FOR THE CHILDREN—Kay Kean, 10; Bill Kean, 12, and Dolly White, 10, wear types of clothes to be sent young war victims in Europe

A fashion show of Red Cross refugee garments may not reveal the last word in style, but it gives assurance that thousands of men, women and children in the war zone will be comfortably dressed this winter, thanks to the efforts of American volunteer workers.

Designs for the clothing are on simple lines so there will be no difficulty in adapting general sizes to individual wearers when garments are distributed. They must also be simple to sew, so as not to present difficulties for inexperienced volunteer workers nor have details that would slow up production.

The women's dresses are cut straight back and front with seams under the arms, long, straight sleeves, a round collar at the neck, one pocket on the blouse and a belt. They are in navy and a lighter shade of blue, brown and gray. Two other more elaborate patterns have been made up in samples. After simplification these will be used for the women's dresses to be made by the District chapter.

FOR THE MEN—Bob Duncan and Ken Cramer model convalescent robe, "beanie" cap and smoking jacket—gifts refugees will welcome

The children's clothes include simple little dresses in pretty shades of woolen material and sweater and skirt outfits for the girls. The boys have blue and brown corduroy overalls, flannel shirts to wear with them and also little suits with short pants and cotton shirts.

Some of the little English boys, accustomed to short pants and short socks, were disappointed when long corduroy overalls were issued to them. When word reached headquarters here, the women, although they like the corduroy model best, decided there should be suits with short pants, too, for the little fellows who wanted them.

Men's garments include sweaters, socks, mufflers, mittens, caps or "beanies," also bed jackets, convalescent robes, hospital bed shirts, operating gowns, undershirts, shirts and night shirts.

FOR THE WOMEN—Mrs. Hazel Munns, Mrs. F. W. Pennoyer, Lilla S. LaGarde and Mrs. William P. Burdick display garments made by District Red Cross for winter wear

Teamsters Yell Their Approval Of Third Term

Convention Hall Resounds to Cheers; Backing Unanimous

The A. F. of L.'s International Brotherhood of Teamsters yesterday whipped behind President Roosevelt's reelection campaign in a cheering, unanimous convention vote.

Casting aside a 40-year tradition of nonpartisanship, the representatives of 450,000 union teamsters rose to their feet in Constitution Hall to thunder approval for a third-term resolution.

The action came as 1,300 delegates prepared for an address by the President.

It followed a morning session at which Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, making an unscheduled address, received vigorous applause for indicating his support for a third term. The delegates gave the New Yorker a tumultuous ovation when he declared:

"There is only one purpose for our national defense program. As long as President Roosevelt heads our country that purpose is to keep us out of war."

When the demonstration had subsided, LaGuardia added:

"When this program is completed, when we are prepared to meet all comers, then I can assure you there will be no comers."

Nevertheless, at the afternoon session, the delegates unanimously approved a resolution condemning the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, which both the President and LaGuardia have indorsed.

The resolution stated that the draft bill contains the "threat of plunging the Nation into war" and added that it would "create a military caste, regiment the entire Nation and place America in a condition not unsimilar to that of totalitarian nations."

The delegates also adopted a resolution declaring that the split in labor's ranks "is destroying all the advances labor has made." The resolution empowered Daniel J. Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Union, to "continue his efforts" to bring about a settlement of the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. dispute.

Before adjournment of the afternoon session, Tobin, who is director of the Democratic National Committee's labor division, told the delegates that members of the union were free to vote as they pleased in the Presidential election.

"The labor movement," he said, "was founded on the principle of freedom of expression, and you are not deviating from that principle in voting support for President Roosevelt. There is no penalty in this union for the way a man votes—no penalty, but the penalty of his own conscience, if he has any."

Roosevelt Calls For 'Teamwork'

progress we are making."

Though the speech was announced as the President's labor speech of the campaign, it ran the gamut of national defense issues as well as labor and social objectives.

Promising not only to hold but push forward on labor and social fronts, he charged campaign opposition "from those who love the laboring man in November but forget him in January."

And answering Willkie's Labor Day pledge to "arrest the present trend toward placing labor unions under Governmental control," the President said it was characteristic of a free and democratic nation "that it have free and independent labor unions."

In defending the principle of plant conscription as "nothing new in American life," Mr. Roosevelt did not mention Willkie's opposition to the Russell-Overton "draft industry" amendment to the conscription bill. Willkie favored conscription of industry "by rule and regulation instead of by the arbitrary action of one man."

Warns Against Weakness

The President declared that no business is above its Government, and Government should be empowered to "deal adequately with any business which tries to rise above its Government." He said that only in isolated cases would owners of plants resist Government use at a fair and reasonable price, but when such cases arise "the Government cannot stand by, helpless in its efforts to arm and defend itself."

Weakness, he told the teamsters and radio listeners, in these days "is a cordial invitation to attack." He declared that "only those who seek to play upon the fears of the American people discover an attempt to lead us into war" and said the American people "will reject that kind of propaganda of fear."

They know, he said, that against the forces loose in the world today the best defense is the strongest preparedness, with "fighting men and fighting equipment in front, and fighting industry and agriculture behind the lines."

The President said that capital and industry as well as labor and agriculture are responding with "fine teamwork" because workers, farmers and business men "are awake to the perils which threaten America." He said the A. F. L., the C. I. O. and the railroad brotherhoods "are all loyally cooperating" in the national defense effort.

Bargaining Rights Assured

Stressing the New Deal's seven-year record of labor legislation, he said it was this Administration which assured labor of the "untrammeled right" to organize and bargain collectively with employers. He listed laws from wage-hour legislation to child labor and social security reforms that he said had been built "with that foundation."

He condemned obstructions in the path of this program "from certain minority groups in the country who had been accustomed for too many years to the exploitation of the great mass of people who worked for them."

Toward the goal of "the security and the high standard of living for every man, woman and child," he listed the following goals:

Broadening and extension of social security benefits.

Unemployment insurance for a larger number of workers.

Extension of old-age pensions with increases in the amount of the pension so no needy person will lack "adequate food, clothing and lodging to the end of the road."

First Political Speech

He said the people must choose between this type of government and one run by "those who by their action, if not always by their word, have shown their fundamental opposition to the main objectives."

Although the speech was the President's first political blow of the campaign announced as such, some intimately associated with his campaign predicted it would not be his last. Increasingly during October as election day approaches, these said, the President will leave his study and his inspection tours to slug it out with Willkie, although no speech will take him farther than 13 hours from Washington.

Other political developments:

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, fifth Senator to go down in State primaries, bade farewell to the Senate in which he has sat for 28 years. Ashurst congratulated his successful opponent, Judge Ernest W. McFarland, and offered to campaign for his election. He indicated his opposition to the conscription bill was one factor in his defeat.

Protest to Willkie

Republican Vice Presidential Nominee McNary and Republican National Committee chairman planned to fly West to Rushville, Ind., today for conferences with Wendell L. Willkie. One subject for discussion, it was learned, will be protests by some House Republicans against Willkie's opposition to the Fish amendment to delay the draft, which was supported by 140 House Republicans.

Charles O. West, former White House liaison man with Congress and active in the Ohio third term movement will resign as a member of the Treasury's Processing Tax Board of Review to work in the Democratic National Committee's New York speaker's bureau with Representative McCormick (Democrat), of Massachusetts, it was learned.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech, Expressing 'Determination to Keep War Away'

Promises of 'Short Cuts to Prosperity' Lead to 'Cruel Disappointment,' As Shown by Events Abroad, He Says

Mr. Tobin, Members of the Convention:

I am in a sort of quandary tonight. I don't know whether this is a political speech or not. I don't know because in these days, if at a certain period of the year, you refer to anything that happened in George Washington's time, or Abraham Lincoln's or at any period in the past, including the past seven years, it's a great question as to whether you are talking American history or politics. And so I throw myself on your indulgence, and on the indulgence of the radio companies (who in the one case would be paid and in the other would not be paid)—and on the indulgence of the American public. I don't know.

During the past weeks, in several sections of the East, I have been inspecting the progress of our national defense. I have gone through navy yards and private yards to watch the building of destroyers, submarines and aircraft carriers; I have visited aviation units to see our modern fighting planes; I have been in our great gun factories where I have seen the most modern guns of all types, swiftly being molded into shape; I have visited camps where young Americans are receiving training and instruction in the tactics of the warfare, and the broader tactics of life, of today. Through it all, there was the impressive conviction that America is rising to meet the ever-growing need for an adequate physical armed defense of the country.

Tonight in a very real sense, I feel as I stand here that I am visiting another type of national defense, equally important in its own way in meeting the needs of the times. Enduring strength to a nation and staying power in an emergency definitely call for an efficient and determined labor force carrying on the processes of industry and trade. And when I speak of a "labor force" I very definitely include those who toil in their fields as well as those who toil in industry. Teamsters will be the first to assert that farmers labor, too.

It is one of the characteristics of a free and democratic modern Nation that it have free and independent labor unions. In country after country in other lands, labor unions have disappeared as the iron hand of the dictator has taken command. Only in free lands have free labor unions survived. When union workers can assemble with freedom and independence in conventions like this, it is proof that American democracy has remained unimpaired—and it is symbolic of our determination to keep it free.

Cause of Labor Has Traveled Forward

Yours is now one of the great international labor unions of America. You can remember, however, other days—days when labor unions were considered almost un-American by some individuals in our land. You can remember when it was rare, indeed, for an employer even to consider collective bargaining with his workers; when it was common practice to discharge any worker who joined a union. You can remember when employers sought to meet threatened strikes by demanding that their Government—Federal or State—call out armed troops. You can remember when many large employers resorted to the un-American practice—still unfortunately followed in some sections of the country—of hiring labor spies and setting up private arsenals to ferret out members of a union.

The cause of labor has traveled forward since those days, over a road beset with difficulties, both from within its membership and from without. Your own organization is an outstanding example of the progress which has been made. By 1933 (it seems almost like ancient history to me) your membership had dropped to 70,000. Within the last seven years you have grown to a membership of 500,000.

In those same seven years organized labor as a whole has become stronger in membership, in influence, and in its capacity to serve the interests of the laboring man and woman, and of society in general, than at any other time in our history. Much of this progress has been due to the one thing which this Administration, from the very beginning, has insisted upon—the assurance to labor of the untrammeled right to organize and to bargain collectively with their employers. That principle has now become firmly imbedded in the law of the land; it must remain as the foundation of industrial relations for all times.

The principle has the support today not only of organized labor as a whole but also of hundreds of thousands of decent, practical, forward-looking employers. A decade ago a minority of employers were willing to accept the principle of collective bargaining; today the majority of employers gladly adopt it.

And with that foundation, the last seven years have seen a series of laws enacted to give to labor a fair share of the good life to which free men and women in a free nation are entitled as a matter of right. Fair minimum wages are being established for workers in industry; decent maximum hours and days of labor have been set, to bring about an American standard of living and recreation; child labor has been outlawed in practically all factories; a system of employment exchanges has been created; machinery has been set up and strengthened and successfully used for the mediation of labor disputes. Over them all has been created a shelter of social security—a foundation upon which is being built protection from the hazards of old age and unemployment.

This progress of the last seven years has been difficult. It has been beset by obstruction and by bitter propaganda from certain minority groups in the community who had been accustomed for too many years to the exploitation of the great mass of people who worked for them. It was the same type of opposition to which I had become accustomed during my entire public career, dating back to my first election to the Senate of the State of New York 30 years ago this autumn, continuing through my service for nearly eight years as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and my service during four years as Governor of the largest labor-employing State in the Union.

You will remember that kind of opposition in the campaign of four years ago when certain employers, politicians and newspapers—all of whom are now active in this campaign—in an effort to mislead and intimidate labor, went to the extent of putting untrue electioneering notices in pay envelopes in order to smash the new Social Security Act and force its repeal by electing its enemies.

That kind of opposition comes only too often from those who regularly for three years and eight months block labor's welfare, and then for four months loudly proclaim that they are labor's true friends—from those who love the laboring man in November but forget him in January.

Advance Accomplished With Patience

In spite of that opposition the vast majority of our small businessmen have now become convinced that the gains of labor are the gains of the entire interdependent community, and that the welfare of labor is indispensable to the welfare of all. They know now that their best customer is a satisfied, adequately paid worker with a feeling of security against unemployment and poverty in his old age.

We are still, however, quite distant from the objective which we seek—the security and the high standards of living for every man, woman and child which the resources and man power of America makes possible.

Our advance has been accomplished with patience and deliberation. That is the democratic way; that is the road which leads to lasting results. Here in America we have kept our feet on the ground; our progress has been steady and sure; we have not been misled by illusory promises.

Events abroad have shown too late the result of the other kind of methods—promises of swift, revolutionary relief; seductive pictures of panaceas; short cuts to prosperity and plenty, pictured as simple and easy—all of these have led to the same cruel disappointment. For these promises people yielded up their liberties and all that made life dear. In exchange, they have received only the rationing of their news, the rationing of their religion, the rationing of the clothes upon their backs and the rationing of the bread upon their tables.

Our progress must continue to be a steady and deliberate one—we cannot stand still, we cannot slip back. We must look forward to certain definite things in the near future. For example, the benefits of social security should be broadened and extended; unemployment insurance should cover a larger number of workers. Our old age pension system must be improved and extended; the amount of the pension should be increased, and, above all, these pensions must be given in a manner which will respect the dignity of the life of service and labor which our aged citizens have given to the Nation.

People Must Decide On Continuance

It is my hope that soon the United States will have a national system under which no needy man or woman within our borders will lack a minimum old-age pension which will provide adequate food, clothing and lodging to the end of the road—without having to go to the poorhouse to get it. And I look forward to a system which, in addition to this bare minimum, will enable those who have faithfully toiled in any occupation to build up additional security for their old age which will allow them to live in comfort and happiness.

The people must decide whether to continue the type of government which has fostered the progress to date, or whether to turn it over to those who by their action, if not always by their word, have shown their fundamental opposition to the main objectives toward which we have worked in the past and to which we are definitely committed for the future.

There are some who would not only stop now the progress we are making in social and labor legislation, but would even repeal what has been enacted during the past seven years—all on the plea that an adequate national defense requires it. They would seek unlimited hours of labor. They would seek lower wages. They would seek the cancellation of those safeguards for which we have all struggled so long.

I still believe, however, as I did when I said on May 26 last: "We must make sure in all that we do that there be no breakdown or cancellation of any of the great social gains which we have made in these past years. . . . There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a retreat from any of our social objectives—conservation of resources, assistance to agriculture, housing, and help to the underprivileged."

Our mighty national defense effort against all present and potential threats cannot be measured alone in terms of mathematical increase in the number of soldiers and sailors, or of guns or tanks or planes. Behind them all must stand a united people whose spiritual and moral strength has not been sapped through hunger or want or fear or insecurity. The morale of a people is an essential supplement to their guns and planes.

I am convinced that a breakdown of existing labor and social legislation would weaken rather than increase our efforts for defense. Continuance of them means the preservation of the efficiency of labor. It means the return to work of several millions still unemployed.

The employment of additional workers and the provisions for overtime payments for overtime work will insure adequate working hours at decent wages to do all that is now necessary in physical defense. We will not overlook the lesson learned in Europe in past years.

No Room in Labor For the Racketeer

At times, internal obstacles to the growth of labor unions have come in those rare instances where the occasional scoundrel—it's a good old-fashioned word—has appeared in position of leadership. Labor unions are not the only organizations which have to suffer innocently for the crimes and misdeeds of one or two of their selfish and guilty members. The rule applies to all organizations, to all trades and professions alike, including the profession of law, to which I belong.

I cannot add to the terms of condemnation which your president, my old friend Dan Tobin, included in his report to your convention in which he said:

". . . It is indeed pitiful and heartbreaking and seriously depressing to find that amongst our enormous membership, composed of clean men, fathers of families, Americans of the purest type—to find amongst this membership some creatures so bereft of decency and honor as to bring disgrace upon the international union."

Labor knows that there is no room in the labor movement for the racketeer or the strong-arm man. Government is determined to help labor unions clean their house of those few persons who have betrayed them.

In this great crisis has come proof that organized labor, as well as other groups of our citizens, is aware of its own responsibilities. I have called on representatives of labor to serve, and have placed them in responsible positions to take part in the defense work of their Government. From the very start, representatives of labor, including your own distinguished president, have shared in formulating and administering the program.

I am particularly glad to be able to say that the A. F. L., the C. I. O., and the railroad brotherhoods are all loyally cooperating in this effort with the National Defense Commission and with the Army and Navy. This cooperation in the task of national defense will, I hope, encourage closer and more friendly relations between these great labor organizations.

National Unity Basis of Defense

I know that America will never be disappointed in its expectation that labor will always continue to do its share of the job we now face, patriotically and unselfishly.

In our search for national unity as the basis of national defense, it is necessary and it is fair that every human being in the United States contribute his share. This applies both to those who train in the fighting forces and to the forces of workers behind the lines.

It is equally necessary and fair that every dollar of capital in America also contribute its share. Just so long as we continue to call upon men to train for combat, and for service behind the lines, will we also continue to call upon the industrial plants of the Nation for the service which they can give.

Capital and industry as well as labor and agriculture are responsible, and I know will continue to respond.

The Nation, through its elected representatives (not just the President alone but the Senate and the House of Representatives) is now adopting the principle of selective universal training of its young men. On the same principle, no reasonable person can object to giving the Government the power to acquire the services of any plant or factory for adequate compensation, if the owner refuses to make its services available to the defense needs of the Nation. This is nothing new in American life. The principle of eminent domain or eminent use is as old as democratic government itself. It merely permits government to acquire or to use, for a fair and reasonable price, any property which is necessary for its proper functioning.

The overwhelming majority of our munitions and other defense requirements are now manufactured by private enterprise under private management. We continue that progress. It is only in the rare, isolated case that the owner of a plant will refuse to deal with his government in a fair way.

But if and when such case does arise, the Government cannot stand by, helpless in its efforts to arm and defend itself. No business is above its government; and government should be empowered to deal adequately with any business which tries to rise above its government.

In all of these plans for national defense, only those who seek to play upon the fears of the American people, discover an attempt to lead us into war. The American people will reject that kind of propaganda of fear, as they have rejected similar types which are "occasionally" spread at election time. They know that against the raging forces loose in the world the best defense is the strongest preparedness—fighting men and equipment in front, and fighting industry and agriculture behind the lines.

Weakness in these days is a cordial invitation to attack. That is no longer theory; it is a proven fact—proved in the past year.

I hate war now more than ever. I have one supreme determination—to do all I can to keep war away from these shores for all time. I stand, with my party, upon the platform adopted in Chicago:

"We will not participate in foreign wars, and we will not send our Army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside of the Americas, except in case of attack."

Let us have an end to the sort of appeasement which seeks to keep us helpless by playing on fear and by indirect sabotage of all the progress we are making. "Appeasement" is a polite word for misdirected partisanship.

In our efforts for national defense, fine teamwork has been developed—and you teamsters know what that word "teamwork" means.

The continuance of this teamwork, after the present emergency is over, will have consequences of lasting good to the Nation as a whole. It will enable us to enjoy an internal security transcending anything heretofore known.

Ours is a great heritage; we are determined with all our effort and might to keep it intact. The workers in the factories, the farmers on the land, and businessmen in plants and offices are awake to the perils which threaten America. No selfish interest, no personal ambition, no political campaign can sway the majority will of our people to make America strong—and to keep it free.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AS HE ADDRESSED TEAMSTERS LAST NIGHT

Tells Teamsters Of 'Untrammeled Right' to Organize

Teamsters Wild Cheering 'Most Inspiring' to President

Staid Constitution Hall last night vibrated to the wild applause of whistling, howling, stamping union teamsters, termed by President Roosevelt "the most inspiring, encouraging and sincere audience" he had ever addressed.

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, returned to the platform after seeing the President to his car and reported that the President, moved by the reception his speech had received, had said:

"I have addressed many meetings in my time, and I have faced many audiences, but that was the most inspiring, encouraging and sincere audience it has ever been my pleasure to face and address."

The huge hall, brilliantly lighted, took on the atmosphere of a political rally as the audience leaped to its feet again and again to punctuate the President's speech.

A band, seated in the orchestra pit, blared "Happy Days Are Here Again" as the Chief Executive walked out upon the stage, and ardent rooters flung confetti over the heads of the crowd.

As Tobin prepared to present the President, he asked the teamsters to take their seats again. A few moments later, when cameramen crowded close to the President on the platform, a gruff voice from the audience shouted at them, "Sit down," and immediately a half-laughing roar echoed from the front half of the hall:

"Sit down!"

The President roared with laughter, throwing back his head, while the cameraman backed away sheepishly.

The greatest applause during the speech came when the President said he would do all he could "to keep the war away from these shores for all time."

But this was nothing compared with the ten-minute, ear-splitting ovation that ripped through the hall after the speech was over, forcing the President to stop twice on his way out to wave his thanks.

D. C. Willkie Workers Open Fund Drive

Score of Washington Leaders Accept Posts On Committee

More than a score of Washington civic and business leaders has accepted posts on committees which yesterday launched the fund raising drive of the Washington Willkie committee.

The committee members will form the nucleus of ten teams, each composed of at least ten members. A goal of $15,000 has been set. The money will go to the New York headquarters of the Associated Willkie Clubs.

Committee leaders include Gregory Prince, Mrs. J. Marion Wright, Roger Robb, Mrs. B. Lowndes Jackson, S. Blackwell Jones, and Mrs. Charles Carroll, Cochairmen of committees in the women's divisions are Mrs. John Brooks, Mrs. Prentiss Willson, Mrs. Blaise de Sibour, and Mrs. Roger Robb.

Robb, cofounder of the organization and chairman of the membership committee, said yesterday that upward of 700 of the 2,500 persons registered at the committee headquarters, 727 Fifteenth street northwest, have made contributions to the G. O. P. candidate's campaign.

Members of the organization include persons of all parties opposed to a third term, Robb emphasized, among whom are persons from 40 States.

Officers besides Robb are Haven B. Page, cofounder and chairmen; S. Blackwell Jones, treasurer; Bruce Baird, chairman of the finance committee; William P. McCracken, chairman of the speakers' committee, and Paul Shorb, counsel.

whose hand there has been concentrated an enormous amount of power."

Such concentration, he added, "is a destructive thing to democracy—it is a line of force that should be broken."

A reporter asked Willkie whether he thought "indispensability feeds upon itself."

"Indispensability, like jealousy, creates the food whereon it feeds," the nominee replied.

Willkie told reporters he probably would discuss the third-term issue on Constitution Day, September 17, at Amarillo, Tex. He will stop there on his Western tour, which will start from Rushville tomorrow night.

Willkie will go to Indianapolis tomorrow for a noon conference on campaign plans with his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon; Republican Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., and Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota.

Willkie will make four speeches in Chicago Friday.

A reporter asked whether he had any indication the Kelly-Nash Democratic organization there planned "demonstrations" against him.

"Somebody intimated to me that the Kelly-Nash machine would have people at my meetings," was the reply. "I expect Kelly-Nash to do anything they can to defeat me, by any means."

Willkie expressed the belief the Kelly-Nash organization "is an asset to my side instead of the President's." Mayor Edward Kelly, Willkie asserted, has been one of the Administration's "principal advisers, along with Boss Flynn, Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn."

A reporter asked whether, if elected, Willkie would retain Cordell Hull as Secretary of State.

Favors a Clean Sweep

"If I am elected President on the Republican ticket," the nominee responded, "I would not keep any of the present officials. But I don't want to get into personalities."

Willkie made public a letter from 16 American writers pledging support to his Presidential candidacy and declaring that it would be "impossible for a third term not to drag us toward totalitarianism."

The letter was signed by Clarence Budington Kelland, Katherine Brush, Boyden Sparks, Booth Tarkington, Rex Beach, Mignon C. Eberhart, George Pattullo, Kenneth Roberts, Faith Baldwin, Adela Rogers St. Johns, James Truslow Adams, Arthur Train, Irvin S. Cobb, Kathleen Norris, Charles G. Norris and Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Oehmann Asks For Inspection Staff Merger

Would Pool Functions Of 4 Agencies to Give Public Better Service

Reorganization of the District's Department of Inspection to consolidate the functions of the building, plumbing, electrical and smoke divisions, has been recommended by Col. John W. Oehmann, it was learned yesterday.

Feature of the plan is to pool the services of the 37 inspectors of the various divisions in order to reassign their duties to prevent overlapping of inspections and to make possible an assignment of inspectors to various activities from time to time as "the exigencies of the service" demanded.

The plan has the support of Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr.

The consolidations, Col. Oehmann said, would be especially advantageous to the general public doing business with the department.

Centralized Service

Instead of an applicant visiting four different offices (building, plumbing, electrical and smoke) as is now the case, he could obtain all desired information and approvals at one location, Col. Oehmann stated.

His new setup would divide the activities under his jurisdiction into three main classifications, engineering, administrative and inspectional. Col. Oehmann envisions having all offices centrally located in the District Building.

Personnel of the engineering section would include engineers of the present building, plumbing and electrical divisions. In this way all plans would be consolidated in one room for purposes of examination instead of three locations as is now the case, and the examination of plans would be expedited to a very material degree.

Increases Efficiency

The administrative division would be headed by an administrative assistant (chief clerk), and its personnel would be made up of the clerical forces of divisions now under Col. Oehmann's supervision. A physical consolidation of the clerical personnel would make it possible to issue, record and file all types of permits at one location, thereby increasing the efficiency of the service. Furthermore, he stated, the consolidation of all clerical personnel of the department in one group would make it possible to assign these clerks where the work is heaviest.

The inspectional division would be composed of the inspection forces of the various divisions. The value of such a consolidation would be considerable, he said. It would make possible a reassignment of duties to prevent overlapping of inspections, and make possible an assignment of inspectors to various activities from time to time as the exigencies of the service demanded.

At present there are 25 men assigned to the building inspection division, 12 to plumbing, 6 to smoke and boiler and 14 to the electrical division, or a total of 57 inspectors. In his 1942 budget estimates, Col. Oehmann asks for two more inspectors.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Theater Guild Kicks Capital Over the Heart

Helen Hayes' 'Twelfth Night' Slips Away; Spencer Tracy a Washington Visitor Today; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE MOST ACUTE DISAPPOINTMENT to Washington theatergoers is to be read between the lines of a communication just received from Joseph Heidt, press representative of the Theater Guild.

BELL

Mr. Heidt, in his artless, carefree and noncommittal way, confides that the Theater Guild and Gilbert Miller, in association, will begin rehearsals Friday morning, September 20, of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," with the Capital's native Helen Hayes as Viola and Maurice Evans as Malvolio. It is not until he gets to the final adjustment of the preliminary tour that the thing becomes alarming to you, Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, and me.

It seems that "Twelfth Night" will open its brief road tour in the Shubert Theater, New Haven, Conn., for a three-day engagement, beginning Thursday night, October 17. There will be four performances there, including a Saturday matinee. Monday, October 21, will find the production at the Colonial Theater, Boston, for two weeks, followed by a similar tour of duty at the Forrest Theater, in Philadelphia, opening Monday evening, November 4. The play will open in New York on Monday night, November 18, at a theater as yet undecided.

If you feel inclined to run down this itinerary to its last analysis, you will discover—much to your chagrin, no doubt—that "Twelfth Night" has been quietly and more or less surreptitiously deleted from the early-season bookings on E street. This affords Mr. Plohn and the rest of us no comfort whatsoever.

The case is additionally complicated by the fact that Franchot Tone's withdrawal from the cast of Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column" has placed the National's second potential booking in some jeopardy. That leaves the new season of living drama and all of its prospective supporters on a bit of a spot.

Nothing seems to have happened, so far, to the opening attraction, "Pins and Needles," booked to relight the National on Septemebr 23, but who can tell what can happen in two weeks?

The Theater Guild may have some deep and profoundly impressive reason for its cancellation of "Twelfth Night" in Washington, but I nevertheless am constrained to recall that Katharine Cornell once made a similar mistake. Miss Cornell, once upon a time, felt that one of her hit plays would do best by playing one week in Washington and two in Philadelphia. The single Washington week grossed approximately $28,000. Her first in Philadelphia did something like $15,000 and the second week much less. Had she reversed the allotment of playing time she would have been thousands to the good in the exchequer. Maybe the Theater Guild and Mr. Miller will find out, although I construe it as no part of my job to tell them how to run their business.

Steady yourself! Hang onto the nearest support! Also hang onto your hats—if you wear the ding-busted things. Something comes off today that will, or should, rock the sedate National Capital.

To get immediately to the gist of the thing, Spencer Tracy, among the foremost of the Hollywood actors—if not really the top man of the film capital—will arrive in Washington this morning at 8:40 to spend two or three days in discovering what the heart-throb of his country is all about. Mr. Tracy will be ensconced in the Mayflower Hotel, one is given to believe, and at something like 4 o'clock this afternoon will meet the press in a suite or a cocktail lounge, some secret hideout, or somewhere.

It would be a little silly at this juncture to attempt an appraisal of Mr. Tracy's command of public attention. He has been an Academy Award winner more times than you can shake a stick at—if you are a stick-shaker-atter—and most recently has been Clark Gable's pal and, incidentally Nemesis, in "Boom Town," one of the more pungent of the M-G-M productions. This costellar affiliation is no new thing to the cinema. It happened in "San Francisco" and "Test Pilot." It is always one of the high spots of motion picture casting.

We have never met Mr. Tracy. We always have had a tremendous urge to make his acquaintance. Now seems to be the time. Provided, that is, one is able to wedge his way through the autograph hunters and other idolators who recognize in Spencer Tracy about the best the cinema has to offer in naturalistic and forceful preformance.

My information is that Spence is not here officially, but on his own to take a look at Mr. Hoover's FBI, the Capitol, the Lincoln Memorial and the other spots that have engaged the interest of stellar players who have managed to get here before him. My forecast would be that he will have a preeminently pleasant, if slightly pestered, time of it.

And today is the day that the Capitol breaks out its new bill of a Thursday for the first time. Yeah, I know we've borne down on that before. This is merely a reminder. They sometimes come in handy.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 11.

You know, if John Carroll had had a couple more scenes in "Hired Wife," he would have stolen the picture from Roz Russell and Brian Aherne. So what? So his home studio, Metro, is letting him play in the Marx Brothers picture, and if he's lucky, he'll get one scene. You can thank Dirctor Bill Seiter for the success of "Hired Wife," which is filled with sex, sophistication, and not one touch of senility. It's a laugh from beginning to end, yet the theme is as old as the hills. But it's what he does with his actors that counts. He did the same thing for Walter Pidgeon and Kay Francis in Deanna Durbin's "It's a Date."

HOPPER

"Rangers of Fortune" is a rip-snorting, roaring hit. It's a new kind of western. And there again you can thank Director Sam Wood, because Fred MacMurray has never been as good. Albert Dekker will prove to be one of the most useful men in pictures—what perfect timing! And Gilbert Roland has a whole new career ahead of him. If Joseph Schildkraut didn't always turn villain, he'd be hailed as a star. But he ends up the rat he always is, after a gorgeous performance.

Ran into Charles Laughton, who was all made up for one more scene in "They Knew What They Wanted," which I hear is that picture you've been waiting to see. He came toward me with his arms outstretched, and I was licking my chops for a compliment, when he blurted out, "You do wear the damndest hats!"

A note from Audrey Reynolds about Constance Bennett says Constance was not only prompt but cooperative, and always charming to the lesser fry during "Tonight at 8:30," and went on: "I like Miss Bennett because she shows her likes and dislikes, which is a healthy contrast to the hypocrisy masquerading as good manners."

How would you like to see Paulette Goddard teamed with Spence Tracy in Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat?" Metro's trying to get her. Joe Pasternak wants her opposite Fred Astaire in his next picture at Universal. As Paulette says, "Gee, I'm glad I didn't get 'Scarlett.' If I had, all these nice things wouldn't have happened to me."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 11. (INS). Jawn Barrymore's admirers, who lamented over his lack of dignity in "The Great Profile," may not be too pleased to hear that his next picture is "The Invisible Woman," at Universal. Well, he can't play Hamlet all his life. Personally I think John is right. If he didn't do these comedies he would probably be playing third-rate rolls instead of having a story built around him and getting laughs in all the theaters.

PARSONS

"The Invisible Woman," by Joe May and Kurt Siodmak, is a story of a woman who appears and reappears with lightning rapidity. Universal is looking for a very, very beautiful girl with a seductive voice, and you can imagine there will be plenty of fun with John playing the professor who makes her disappear.

Every Sunday morning I see Don Ameche at a little church in the valley, and last Sunday he was beaming because Honore and the baby were home at last. You'd think after "Four Sons" Don would be used to being a proud papa, but my favorite doctor and I had to stop and hear all about the new arrival. But the real news about Don is that he is not going to do "Western Union" as advertised. None other that Robert Young is being borrowed from M.-G.-M. to take over the role of the half-breed Indian—which is something different for Senor Young, who has been doing comedies.

Marsha Hunt, who is really a very pretty girl, has been disguising herself so much of late that we have almost forgotten her as she really looks. In "Pride and Prejudice," remember, she was the bespectacled, awkward, plain sister, and in "Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President" she played an old woman, which is unusual, to say the least, when we consider that Marsha has more than her share of good looks. But now she goes into "Flight Command" with Ruth Hussey, and she will play her own self.

Chatter in Hollywood: The friends of Carole Landis and Willis Hunt, jr., are moving heaven and earth to persuade them to effect a reconciliation. When she walked out he telephoned every hotel in town until he found her. Just as the attorneys were getting ready to file the divorce suit he persuaded Carole to go to a ranch in Victorville and talk over their matrimonial troubles. A property settlement had already been effected so that it is not a question of finance but more a question of temperament.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Huntz Hall and his best girl, Elsie Anderson, eloped and were wed in Yuma Sunday. Last night they were celebrating at the La Conga; Robert Sinclair, M.-G.-M. director, and his wife, Jane Buchanan, have said adieu to marriage; today was a big day for Marcel Rogez, bride of Wes Ruggles. She was fingerprinted as an alien and took out her first citizenship papers in one fell swoop; Greer Garson, the gorgeous redhead, is the latest flu victim; Claudette Colbert celebrates her birthday Friday, the 13th; Raymond Massey flew East today to be with his daughter, who is being operated on for appendicitis.

Moe the Gimp, who figured in the Ruth Etting case, got his picture snapped at the preview of "City for Conquest" almost as much as the movie stars; Cesar Romero is passing out cigars on account of he's an uncle now. His sister's baby arrived today and she is calling him Cesar, jr.; the Matty Melnecks have adopted a baby; Mary Beth Hughes denies that sparkler she's wearing was given her by Robert Stack. She says it was part of an inheritance left her by her uncle who died recently; Bill Marshall presented Helen Gilbert with a ring today. Several months ago everybody thought Helen and Vic Orsatti would march to the altar.

Sylvia Conn, magazine editor, will wed Ned Brown, the agent, as soon as her divorce is final.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Three Pages of Stages and Screen Appear in Sunday's Post

Varied Fare On Incoming Theater Bills

Capitol Opens Today, "Personals" for Keith's, "Howards" at Earle

"DR. KILDARE GOES HOME." With this latest release in the "Dr. Kildare" series, the Capitol Theater this morning inaugurates a new policy of Thursday openings. Lionel Barrymore and Lew Ayres have their familiar roles of the elderly surgeon and his promising assistant. The story concerns their efforts to save the life of another "mystery" patient and their struggle to win sanitary reforms from an old-fashioned, country town council. John Shelton, Laraine Day, Alma Kruger, Gene Lockhart, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn and Nat Pendleton are in the cast. On the stage, Ciro Rimac and his orchestra offer "Pan-American Revue," with Charley Boy, Aliza Camargo, Harry Rose, the Dunn Brothers and Little Fred and his Football Dogs.

RKO-Keith's

"DANCE, GIRL, DANCE." Maureen O'Hara and Lucille Ball will appear in person at four performances tomorrow in the first local showings of their new costarring comedy. The two young stars appear as ladies of burlesque whose relationship develops into a feud. In this one there's the much-publicized fight scene between the two over their respective merits, while Louis Hayward portrays a youthful heir who marries one of the girls between his first and third marital tie-up with Virginia Field. Ralph Bellamy, Maria Ouspenskaya, Mary Carlisle, Katharine Alexander, Walter Abel, Ernest Truex and Vivian Fay head the supporting company. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA." Cary Grant and Martha Scott have the starring roles in this story of Colonial Virginia, adapted from Elizabeth Page's widely praised novel "The Tree of Liberty." The story concerns a hardy, untamed frontiersman who takes a gracious and gentle belle as his bride to the wilderness of the frontier. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson, Alan Marshal, Paul Kelly and Elizabeth Risdon are in the cast. The stage revue is titled "Colonial Days" and features June Forrest, Radio City singing star, and Bob Hall, the Dolores Dancers, Sunny Rice and the returning Roxyettes in new routines. Open tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"MYSTERY SEA RAIDER." Commencing with the torpedoing of a passenger liner shortly after declaration of the present war, the story of the melodrama moves to submarines in the Caribbean. While there is no masking of identification of the Nazi and British participants, the film is said to take no sides in the current struggle. Henry Wilcoxon has the leading role with Carole Landis, Onslow Stevens, Kathleen Howard, Wallace Reirden, Monte Blue, Kay Linaker and Henry Victor in the supporting roles. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"THE SEA HAWK." After a holdover engagement at the Earle, this Errol Flynn adventure film reopens at the Metropolitan. The story tells of Elizabethan England. Flora Robson, Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp and Henry Daniell top the cast of hundreds and there is a musical score by Erich Korngold. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"BOOM TOWN." This Clark Gable-Spencer Tracy-Claudette Colbert-Hedy Lamarr-Frank Morgan vehicle of oilmen and their ups and downs continues on F street for a third week.

Little

"MAYERLING." One of the finest films the studios of free France produced, this story of an Austrian grand duke's tragic love for a commoner holds over for a second week of revival. Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux are the stars.

Trans-Lux

"STREAMLINED." A romance of railroading, the leading short subject for the incoming week at the newsreel theater, traces the first iron horse to the chrome arrows of today. Other shorts include the National Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Friedrich Feher, playing the Triumphal March from "Aida" and "Hurdle Hoppers," crack riders of the United States Cavalry. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"BURLESQUE PARADE." The third production of the burlesque theater's new season opens Sunday afternoon with Binder and Rosen in the featured spots and with Searletta Kelley as the bright star. Amy Fong, the Chinese beauty, continues through this Saturday's midnight performance.

Roadside

"EAST LYNNE." It's a third week for Mrs. Henry Wood's celebrated warhorse, thus continuing the local barn season through Saturday evening, the 21st. Betty Gray, Larry Lawrence, Norman Rose, Lois Alexander, Florence Kondd, Kenneth Banghart and Bibby Osterwald are in the leads.

Cross Roads

"SMILIN' THROUGH." Elizabeth Winburn's vehicle, made famous a generation ago by Jane Cowl, brings down the curtain for the Virginia barn theater season this Saturday evening. Robert Langley, William Draper, Austin Gillis, Julian Hatcher, Margaret Mansfield and Irma Gordon are the other players.

Open-Air

"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT." The Clark Gable-Claudette Colbert comedy, which won the academy award several seasons ago, will be revived for three evenings, beginning tonight at the drive-in theater on the Richmond pike. "The Lone Wolf Strikes" is the additional feature.

Claude Rains Thinks He Is In Paradise

Up the Hard Way, Noted Actor Finds Hollywood Bonanza

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Sept. 11. — Claude Rains, who learned the hard way how to be an actor, said today he guessed he'd reached Paradise.

He meant he'd become well established in Hollywood. You can understand how he feels when you realize he started acting when he was 10 years old and that he's been at it all his life in theaters all over the world. Mostly they've been musty backstage, with rats on the floor and sometimes in the manager's chair. He's been stranded thousands of miles from home; he's rehearsed for weeks for shows that never opened; he's been beaten out of his salary by thieving impresarios, and he's had all the tough breaks that can be found during a lifetime in the theater.

Now look at him. He's an American citizen. He earns a weekly salary in four figures at Warner Brothers'. He works only a few hours a day, hardly ever at night. If he's thirsty there's a waiter on the set to bring him tea.

He has a house such as he never even dreamed of ten years ago, plus a country estate with a seventeenth century stone house in Pennsylvania. The radio's always after him to give him still more money for aerial dramatics.

Takes Pay and Does Best

And if any actor is happy in Hollywood and satisfied with the way the master minds run the place, that man is Claude Rains. He takes their pay and does his best without argument about his roles. If his pictures are smash hits, that's fine; if they're fizzles, his salary goes on just the same.

Currently he is wearing clerical garb as David Belasco, the great theatrical producer, in "The Lady With Red Hair."

The lady was Mrs. Leslie Carter, the amateur actress Belasco turned into a great star. She is being played by Miriam Hopkins, and Rains is spending his time before the cameras teaching her how to act—as if she didn't already know.

How Rains became a movie star is one of those Hollywood stories that makes you blink. In 1933, in any event, he was in a Broadway play when a Universal scout looked him up for a screen test. Rains was flattered.

He gave that test all he had. Nobody ever emoted and cried and laughed before the cameras more earnestly than he. He passed the test. Universal brought him to Hollywood.

Became Invisible Star

"They told me I was to be the star of my first picture," Rains recalled. "They said this was very unusual. I nearly broke a button off my chest.

"So I went into the sound stage and started on 'The Invisible Man.' The cameraman photographed my footprints, the smoke from my cigarette, the wrinkles my head made on my pillow, and my fingerprints on door knobs—but he never photographed me. I was an invisible movie star for fair.

"The picture did well and I may have had delusions of grandeur. I specified in my contract that I was to continue to get star billing."

He appeared in a couple of more horror items and then Universal ran out of parts for him.

PAMELA MURRAY, whose husband is in the Coldstream Guards, just arrived in this country and now is a guest at the Iselin home on Long Island. She tells this story of the occasion, four weeks ago, when the dowager Queen Mary came to tea at Badminton, a country estate on the west coast of England . . . For a number of days some nearby towns had been subjected to heavy bombardment, and the guests were extremely nervous, lest the Nazi bombers return to seek a target in the royal visitor . . . "We don't feel quite safe here, your majesty," Pamela confessed, "with these bombs dropping all around here" . . . "Oh, I feel quite safe at Badminton," assured Queen Mary, calmly sipping her tea, "because I hear that Goering wants it very much for his summer place."

It wasn't—and so he resigned.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 11 (AP).—Officers of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, today called meetings for 8 p. m. Friday and 10:30 a. m. Saturday when members will vote on a proposed contract with the Celanese Corporation of America.

The meetings were called after representatives of the Celanese and the union reached an agreement on a new contract in Washington Tuesday.

Five members of the union were discharged Tuesday for taking part in a disturbance at the plant Monday night in which one man was hurt. The man, Robert Helmick, of Ridgeley, W. Va., was not seriously hurt and was released from Allegany Hospital here yesterday.

Fred T. Small, plant manager, said today that the cases of the discharged men may be reviewed if a contract is signed. Minor disorders were reported at the plant today but Small said the situation is greatly improved.

The Zero Hour

Throughout his long career, Winston Churchill has never hesitated to tell the British public the truth no matter how bitter and unpalatable it has happened to be. That is why the note of dogged confidence he has sounded in his recent speeches has rung true. And in some measure events have tended to justify his hopefulness.

During the first stage of the assault on Britain, lasting from August 8 until the indiscriminate air bombardment of London began last Saturday, the British beat off the attacks with such vigor that Hitler was forced to change his tactics. During the last few days a definite and deliberate attempt has been made by the Nazi air force to wipe out London, a metropolis of 8,500,000 souls, a city hallowed by a thousand years of history. And the British have retaliated with similar, although less devastating, assaults on Berlin.

Now Churchill warns his people that their real time of trial is at hand. The next week, he fears, may prove as fateful as was the time of the Spanish Armada or the days when "Nelson stepped between us and Napoleon's grand army at Boulogne." Apparently he has extensive information as to elaborate measures taken by Germany to prepare for an invasion of England.

That invasion, he added, may not come. But he emphasized that the danger is there and that every man and woman in the British Isles must steel themselves for the onslaught. For if the invasion is going to be tried at all, "it does not seem," says Churchill, "that it can be longer delayed."

From Germany, in the meantime, come reports that Hitler now plans to send 10,000 plane loads of German bombs daily to smash London once and for all. That may be only a propagandist ruse to trick the British into neglecting their defenses against a push across the Channel. Yet nothing can be taken for granted.

Unless Hitler wins soon, victory may be forever beyond his grasp. So he may decide to chance everything on one gigantic throw of the dice.

If the statement of the British premier and the conduct of the people of London during these last days are any indication of Britain's attitude, however, that country is prepared for any eventuality, destructive and nerve-shattering though it may be.

No Excuse For Delay

It is unfortunate that Senator King favors public hearings on the District reorganization bill. The delay resulting from such procedure would doubtless prevent the Senate from acting on the bill, if present plans for adjournment are followed.

Senator King's insistence that public hearings be held on many District bills that have come before his committee in the past has been commendable. Those hearings have offered to voteless Washingtonians their chief opportunity to exercise influence upon their municipal government. But in this instance there is no public demand for hearings. All controversial features of the reorganization measure were eliminated in the House.

Ample hearings were held before a House subcommittee this year and last and before the District Commissioners in the interim. Representative Kennedy agreed to amendments or deletions wherever the civic protest was substantial.

Throughout his tenure as chairman of the Senate District Committee Senator King has expressed himself frequently and emphatically in favor of giving the District Commissioners more authority and creating a separate civil service system. Both of these provisions are in the House bill.

The reorganization bill as passed by the House is not all that it should be if effective reform is to be accomplished. The skepticism of Senator King as to the claims that it would effect a large saving of District funds is justified by the history of the recent Federal governmental reorganization.

Yet the Kennedy bill does propose substantial reforms in the antiquated District government, fundamentally unchanged since 1878. Its provisions eliminating Budget Bureau control, granting broader authority to the Commissioners, and setting up a local civil service system justify its enactment. The reshuffling of the departments and consolidation of independent boards are a step in the right direction.

The Commissioners, who were cool toward the original Griffenhagen plan, are now behind the House bill. They are to be commended for standing by their guns in the face of unfavorable developments in the Senate.

The Senate District Committee has a long record of responding favorably to the wishes of the Commissioners and civic spokesmen. It is to be hoped that it will not depart from this policy now.

Contradictory Theme

Two themes run through the speech which President Roosevelt delivered to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters last night. The first held special interest for the organized labor groups assembled in Constitution Hall. The second was addressed to his much more extensive radio audience.

In his remarks especially designed for the Teamsters the President put himself in the role of patron saint to the labor movement. But when he spoke for the benefit of the Nation in general, his plea was for national unity and strength in meeting aggressive threats from abroad. Apparently the President failed to realize the basic inconsistency of his two appeals.

The first part of the address was a frank bid for labor votes. Mr. Roosevelt took advantage of the occasion to drive a little deeper the wedge of suspicion and enmity between capital and labor. He asked his audience to recall the use of labor spies and "private arsenals to ferret out members of a union." He implied that labor unions were considered un-American until his Administration came into power.

Then came promises of new benefits for labor—more unemployment insurance, increased pensions for the aged and higher standards of living. The President claimed for his Administration the lion's share of credit for all the gains made by working men and labor unions in recent years. And he clearly implied that, if granted a third term, he will continue to regard himself as the special champion of organized labor.

From this obvious play upon class consciousness the President moved blandly on to talk about "teamwork" in meeting the present emergency. "Weakness in these days," he rightly said, "is a cordial invitation to attack." Again he pointed out that "the raging forces loose in the world" require the "strongest preparedness" in industry and agriculture as well as in our armed forces.

Of course, the national strength about which Mr. Roosevelt talks so loosely can come only from wholehearted cooperation of industry and labor, with the aid of Government, in the production of goods. Its first essential element is not unemployment insurance, however important that may be, but jobs paying good wages for useful work. Yet that fact does not seem to enter into the President's thinking. On the contrary, he is willing to jeopardize industrial cooperation in this time of emergency by again stirring the fires of enmity between employers and employes.

"No selfish interest, no personal ambition, no political campaign," the President declared, "can sway the majority will of our people to make America strong—and to keep it free." Every thoughtful citizen hopes that interpretation of the national will is correct. But only a few minutes before he uttered those words the President was seeking to sway the people by an appeal that is conducive to national weakness instead of strength.

In effect he subordinates the national interest in wholehearted cooperation for defense to his political interest of winning votes next November.

Arizona Goes Consistent

Senator Henry Fountain Ashurst's constituents have availed themselves of that right which the Senator cherishes above all others—the right of changing one's own mind.

By a unanimous vote of Arizona's first Legislature Mr. Ashurst was sent to Washington in 1912. For 28 years his presence in the Senate seemed to be indispensable to Arizona's welfare. But on Tuesday his constituents at last fell into line with the Senator's own political philosophy and registered a sharp change of opinion.

Only last week Senator Ashurst told his colleagues: "I think I stand forth as the shining apostle of the right of men, when they find they are wrong, to pursue the course they believe to be right." So there can be no bitterness over the victory of Judge Ernest W. McFarland at Phoenix. If Mr. Ashurst still retains his keen sense of humor, and that seems scarcely open to question, he will invite, all Arizona to join his Inconsistency Club.

This mythical organization came into prominence in 1937 during the fight over reorganization of the Supreme Court. In the 1936 campaign Senator Ashurst had rebuked Republican critics for uttering what he regarded as a malicious slander to the effect that President Roosevelt, if reelected, would attempt to pack the court. After the election, when the court-packing bill was sent to Congress, the Senator indorsed it.

But he was not embarrassed by that change of front. He made a pretty speech to the Senate on the virtues of inconsistency. One flowery paragraph he had printed on special cards for the consolation of legislators accused of back-tracking. Along with these unique gifts went also invitations to join Mr. Ashurst's Inconsistency Club.

The Senator's vacillation often falls far short of statesmanship. But he has won universal respect for his frankness, fair play and good humor. As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, he flatly refused to interfere with a subcommittee's current hearings on the third-term issue. While proclaiming his loyalty to the Roosevelt Administration, he saw no embarrassment in facing an issue which the President himself had raised. "I do not intend," he told the Senate, "to be put in the position of being a fugitive from information."

The Senator's consistent inconsistency may have contributed little to his defeat. Far more important seems to have been his vote against the military training bill. His opponent made effective use of the Senator's mistake of judgment in this connection. It is especially notable that Arizona's only representative in the House, Congressman Murdock, who favors the draft, won an overwhelming victory.

Presumably Senator Ashurst will be replaced in November by a legislator who more accurately reflects public opinion in Arizona. But that will scarcely minimize the Senate's loss of color, grace and wit in Mr. Ashurst's departure.

Protecting Our Liberties

Solicitor General Biddle has rendered a public service by again calling attention to the fact that civil liberties are constantly being undermined by self-appointed groups acting in the name of democracy.

In his address before the American Bar Association meeting in Philadelphia this week, Mr. Biddle vigorously inveighed against the employment of totalitarian methods in the fight against totalitarianism. It is imperative, he pointed out, to defend ourselves against the destructive doctrines of naziism, fascism and communism. But, he added, "we must not adopt as instruments of defense the very weapons with which we are challenged."

The Solicitor General noted a disturbing rise of vigilantism, resulting in the setting up of little dictators within our own country. He properly denounced the inclination of certain city councils to pass repressive ordinances curtailing the rights of free speech, freedom of the press and of assemblage; of police, prosecutors and judges forgetting the Bill of Rights to crack down on persons holding unpopular views. And he pointed to the dangers of antialien hysteria resulting in the harassment of many loyal and innocent inhabitants.

In attempting to keep the balance between curtailment of spies, saboteurs and Fifth Columnists and preservation of our civil liberties, the Department of Justice has rendered yeoman service. But, as Mr. Biddle points out, the defense of the Bill of Rights cannot be left to the Federal Government alone. It should be the function of all constituted authorities, State, local and Federal. Mr. Biddle appealed particularly to lawyers to hold their place in this front line of defense against totalitarianism.

Some time ago the American Bar Association created a committee on the Bill of Rights which has done excellent work, not least in inspiring the creation of similar bodies in local, county and State bar associations. And, at the present meeting, the A. B. A.'s house of delegates reindorsed the principle of preserving "constitutional methods and procedures." At the same time it ruled out use of constitutional rights as a "screen to hide efforts to undermine our system."

The problem is admittedly complex. It demands firmness on one hand and avoidance of hysteria on the other. Above all, individuals must not arrogate to themselves the right to take action against other individuals deemed to be subversive and dangerous. There is no place for the vigilante in a nation devoted to democracy and seeking with might and main to preserve it.

Back-Seat Delusions

From the Des Moines Register.

Recent tests by the General Motors Corporation indicate that eyestrain, fatigue, and distortion of objects seen through the windows of closed cars—which form 99 per cent of the passenger automobile production—can be markedly reduced or eliminated by the use of new plate safety-glass instead of sheet safety-glass.

It was shown that eye fatigue was 62 per cent greater through sheet glass than through plate, that headaches were 140 per cent more numerous, and that depth perception errors increased 432 per cent. Passengers were found far less able to read road signs and warnings correctly, due to distortion, and were not able to judge either speeds or distances as accurately, especially at night.

But the really important discovery of Dr. A. H. Ryan, who has been conducting experimental research along this line for many months, was that the proverbial "back-seat driver" is an even worse nuisance than she is cracked up to be. (It always is a "she," isn't it?) From the back seat, he says, one looks at an angle through the glass, and, therefore, gets a distorted and blurred picture. The driver, looking through the windshield correctly, gets no such optical illusions.

Who says research isn't wonderful?

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

Past And Present

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer of this remembers the very distant days when this Nation considered itself the only democracy and did not expect much in that line from any other nation; but yet was content to live under a combination of national prosperity and international tolerance. It had had its wars, but not wars of annihilation.

Naturally it seems to him that this combination worked better than the present methods of high-tensioned efficiency and he is opinionated enough to believe it might possibly be made to work for the entire world today despite appearances to the contrary.

For one thing, would-be dictators, under such a combination, do not find it so easy to get a following among their own people. It is conceivable that even our democracy if hard pressed might resort to a dictatorship of its own making in case of war, on the argument of efficiency as against character of government.

While preparing for a defense, we also prepare to take a respected position in the world's affairs, war or no war. May it not be a high aim of such a position incidentally to become an instrumentality for peace-making at the first opening for any prospects of peace?

If the present war continues to the quieter, reflective days of winter hibernation, is not another "Treaty of Portsmouth" a possibility under the guidance of a great neutral power? If this means a peace disastrous to humanity, rather than on the whole favorable to it, of course it is not worth the thought—or the idle fancy, if so it be.

It may be objected that the good will of the United States would not be received as neutral. However that may be just at the moment, a new Administration coming in through our November election would be free from commitments and so might become a power for a world peace less objectionable than a war of the kind now in progress.

Calm Canada

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Considering the state of gibbering idocy to which this Nation has been reduced by the mere threat of Hitler—thousands of miles away—one wonders what would happen if we actually did see the whites of his eyes. By contrast, the peace and orderliness of Canada is a real balm to panic-weary Americans. They are supposed to be in this war, but one would think we were in it and Canada merely a passive observer. They are intent on business as usual and one sees no signs of cowardly fright which has knocked all reasoning powers out of Americans. In this State we are a pushover for Hitler whose most effective weapon is scaring wishy-washy nations into subserviency. They are licked before he fires a gun.

Food is plentiful in Canada and is cheaper than ours, well-cooked and expertly served everywhere. Here and there one sees men—singly or in couples—dressed in unglamorous, serviceable uniforms. Many business places display no flags and in some small towns whole streets are without flags. I saw no army lorries dashing madly here and there as one sees here. The guards around government plants seem inadequate—according to our ideas. (You know we have to have at least three men holding red flags on WPA jobs.)

Let's stop being hysterical and do some calm thinking—even if we have to go to Canada to do it. We are apt to have a home-grown dictator before we know it.

Of Peaceful Assembly

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Thursday night members of the Metropolitan Police Force and the Capitol Police were in the questionable position of causing disorder in what was intended to be a thoroughly orderly and peaceful meeting.

A group of people gathered to hold services of prayer in opposition to the conscription bill on the grounds of the Capitol. They were led by clergymen and backed by leading clergy in all parts of the country. In their minds was the intense desire to preserve the democracy of which most Americans boast.

As the group gathered they were entirely orderly, but were met by police in large numbers who were obviously intent upon trouble. They were actually holding their blackjacks ready in their hands, a distinct contrast to those assembling. (One is reminded of the words from the Gospel, "Be ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves.") They proceeded in a rough and surly manner to try to force the people off the grounds.

It is understood now that there is an ordinance or law prohibiting gatherings on the grounds without a permit. However, it should be noted that the police were aware of the proposed gathering at least 24 hours in advance. They were also aware of the rule, which has been more than once overlooked. It would seem that in view of the circumstances the wisest way to have assured the observance of the law would have been to notify the leaders, who were from out of town. They chose rather to use strong-arm methods at a time when there could only be trouble.

Further, it should be noted that in their sincere efforts to prevent violence they would do well to learn to cooperate with peaceful, constructive groups and guard jealously the rights of free speech and peaceful assembly, particularly in this age, when nations are steadily falling under the rule of dictators. They should certainly not thwart such rights.

May I note conclusive evidence in support of the fact that it was a peaceful assembly? First, after being dispersed from the Capitol grounds with violence, and then from the steps of the Supreme Court Building by a riot squad of unnecessary size (we might say ridiculous size), they assembled on the steps of the postoffice and conducted an orderly meeting, which, one must admit, demanded restraint after the previous provocations. Secondly, they received the commendation of the postmaster, Mr. Vincent Burke, who invited them to make themselves comfortable. Mr. Burke is quoted as saying, "These people don't seem to me to be even noisy talkers. It's all right with me just so long as they're gone in the morning."

It is encouraging to note that at least one police officer had the grace and wisdom to sense the situation and lead the gathering in singing.

If we are to have any shreds of respect for officers of the law and if our liberties as citizens of a democracy are to be preserved, it would seem that a more wholesome relationship must be established.

Mounting Debt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I should owe John Jones, of Baltimore, $100 I would have to get $100 in United States money with which to pay him. If I should owe Lord Stoopnagle, of England, £100 I would have to get £100 of English money with which to pay him. If the United States should owe Germany 45,000,000,000 marks, it would have to get 45,000,000,000 marks of German money with which to pay her. All of that would admittedly be hard. But since the 45,000,000,000 or more of dollars that the United States owes is owing to its own citizens and payable in its own money, it is easy to pay because the United States can by issuing more money or other simple devices run the value of its own money down as much at it pleases. Therefore, the enormous and rapidly mounting debt of the United States is not dangerous. Thus answer our statesmen when forced to answer, although they do a lot of talking about increasing the national income to an amount so large that the present tax rate will balance the budget and begin repaying the debt.

But what happens to the little fellow when the United States runs the value of its money down? He makes as much money as he ever did, maybe, only he can't buy as much with it. And what will happen when the budget is balanced? To answer that question let me remind the reader that the interest on the national debt is a $1,000,000,000 or more a year. The United States is paying that interest, but it is borrowing the money with which to pay it. It is not raising it by taxation, and it necessarily will not do so until the budget is balanced. When the budget is balanced the United States will then begin paying the interest on its debt with money raised by taxation, and the load and burden of the debt will go on. When that time comes, watch the United States run the value of its money down. Watch the value of everything else go up. And above all things, watch the little fellow sweat trying to make ends meet on his salary or wages which, if he is lucky, will probably be as much as they ever were.

And remember that until the budget is balanced the debt and the annual interest on it will go higher and higher, and there is a limit to all things, even the amount of money our Government can borrow from its citizens. If the little fellows have not been doing some thinking about this they had better begin doing some before they vote in November. In the meantime, let's all join in demanding of Congress that it vote more taxes now to support the preparedness expense because if that isn't done the debt will go up so fast the day of reckoning will soon arrive in spite of the efforts of our statesmen to put it off as long as possible.

Posies For Pegler

To all and sundry: Don't overlook Pegler; he is in a class all to himself and a delightful morsel to those who do not take him altogether seriously. Otherwise, he may get into your hair most grievously. He is positively rich in mirth-producing antics of unmitigated bosh. The Post Impressionist

"Number, Please"

I VERY MUCH dislike using the telephone and resort to it only as a last resource. Some of my friends who have dabbled in the occult sciences profess to see in this something psychopathological and prate learnedly of neuroses and phobias with horrendous names. Others dismiss it with the explanation that I was born and bred in Arkansas and just haven't got on to such new-fangled contraptions yet.

The truth of the matter is that I had a perfectly normal attitude toward the telephone till I was forced to earn my daily bread as a telephone operator. That did things to me from which I have not yet recovered.

I had what might be called, by extreme courtesy, a job with an American newspaper in Paris. I solicited advertisements and subscriptions on a percentage basis. The French, as I found out on my first day at the game, are congenitally averse to spending money for advertising. To ask them to spend perfectly good money for advertising in a newspaper which they could not even read was the height of insanity, as some of them kindly and very politely informed me.

I turned my attention to getting subscriptions. The circulation manager gave me a list of Americans in Paris who were not subscribers, and I set out blithely to induce them to become subscribers. Perhaps I could have been successful if I had contrived to find any of them. The list I had, however, did not correspond in any degree with actual conditions. The addresses were there, all right, but the Americans weren't. The list I am convinced, had been compiled by the American Embassy staff at the outbreak of the War of 1914. It was then 1929. Between 1914 and 1929 much water had flowed under the bridges of the Seine and many Americans had drunk themselves to death or returned to their native land.

A child could compute that even 100 per cent of 0 fr. 0 is 0 fr. 0, and that is not enough to live on, even in Paris. I told the circulation manager that I was in imminent danger of starvation.

"Can you operate a telephone switchboard?" he asked me.

"Of course," I replied, with the air of one who had grown up with Alexander Graham Bell.

"That's fine," he said. "Cecile, our switchboard girl, is getting married and moving to Tours. Tomorrow is her last day, and we've got to get somebody to take her place. So if you think you can handle it, get her to show you the ropes and you can take it over."

It was all very simple, Cecile explained, and I nodded wisely, as though it were all vieux jeaux to me. A light comes on and you stick a plug in and say, "Allo! J'ecoute. Ici le Paritime." Then when you find out whom they want, you stick another plug in, push a lever that rings the bell, and wait till the lights go out. Then you pull the plugs out. That was all there was to it, and I must say it looked very simple.

Everything went well during the early hours of my first day at the switchboard. I girded myself with the transmitter at my chest and the receiver clamped on my head, and pretended to discover a run in my silk stockings to the immense edification of Maurice, our office boy, who shrieked with laughter and then sang a music-hall ditty to help pass the time away.

Presently my first call came in. I had arranged with Jim, a friend of mine who worked in the newsroom, to call me up, just to test out the system. "Allo!" Ici le Paritime. Donne-moi ton numero, salaud, et fais vite!"

I didn't need the receiver clamped over my ear to enable me to hear the horrid roars in the editorial sanctum. The Chief himself burst in and regarded me with speechless rage. I floundered in explanations and apologies, while Maurice made gurgling noises behind me.

The Chief returned to his sanctum and addressed me on the telephone in carefully controlled tones: "Appleby, get me Elysee quatre-vingt-dix-neuf soixante-quinze. And hurry!"

French numbers simply aren't made for the telephone. I reeled under the impact of the string of numerals. "What number did you want, sir?" I asked.

The Chief repeated the number, casting self-control to the wind. After three false attempts, connecting me in succession with the advertising manager, the copy room and the morgue and bringing upon me the wrath of each of these departments, I succeeded in getting central.

"Donnez-moi Elysee quatre-quinze," I asked, in a trembling voice.

"There isn't any such number," central informed me, and hung up.

Luckily, I did something wrong at 10:30 (I can't imagine what it was) and blew out a fuse or something, so that the switchboard wouldn't work.

That afternoon I was down in the basement holding copy, happily droning away, "New York, Sept. 19. The market opened firm and confident this morning, with heavy buying in . . ." But I still jump when the telephone rings.

Private Industry And Defense Program

ALTHOUGH THE RELATION between the national defense program and private industry is of critical importance, the country and Congress have as yet had no help from either Mr. Roosevelt or from Mr. Willkie. If the Administration has a policy covering the whole question of taxation, amortization, priorities and commandeering, the principles of its policy can only be guessed at from what has oozed out of Congressional debate and the committee hearings. No policy has ever been stated consistently and authoritatively by Mr. Roosevelt or his spokesmen. As for Mr. Willkie, though the subject is one upon which he might be supposed to have clear and considered views, he has thus far contributed exactly nothing. It is impossible to discover his views because he has never stated them.

On the other hand each candidate has done much to confuse and obstruct a lucid and objective solution of the problem. Mr. Roosevelt raised a costly and unnecessary obstruction when he insisted that the simple amortization provision, which required immediate action, he tied up with a complex "excess profits" bill which could and should have been considered carefully. And Mr. Roosevelt confused the question when he put his primary emphasis upon preventing the rise of "war millionaires" rather than upon obtaining a tax program which will put private industry to work for the national defense. Mr. Willkie's contribution to the confusion of the public mind has been a series of hurried statements, progressively less wide of the mark as he kept on shooting them out, about one subordinate and incidental aspect of the whole problem—namely the power to commandeer.

So on this great matter the country has had no leadership from its leaders.

THE EXTENT of the confusion may be measured by the fact that virtually all public attention has become centered upon the procedure and the legal formulae by which Congress shall reaffirm the power of the government to commandeer property for defense. The fact of the matter is that though this power must exist if the defense program is to be successful, yet the program will surely be a catastrophic failure if the power has to be used much or often. For it is obvious that the United States government would be totally incapable of administering a large number of industrial plants if it did actually commandeer them. This country knows how to operate industry as a whole through private management; it does not know how to operate industry as a whole, or any considerable part of it, by government management. To change over from the system we understand to a different system which we do not understand would simply stall the whole industrial machine.

It follows that the power to commandeer must be held in reserve in order to bring recalcitrant individuals into line. It can be used for that, just as arresting motorists for traffic violations can be used to police the reckless minority. But no traffic could move at all or could be regulated if the police tried to drive all the cars on the road.

NOW IF THE POWER to commandeer is one which must be held in reserve, and used sparingly, then plainly it presents a subordinate question. What is the major question? It is, it seems to me, how to use the other power which government has over industry, namely taxation, to induce private corporations to work efficiently for the national defense. But here we are encountering, I venture to suggest, a set of false and self-defeating dogmas. For what appears to be the prime concern of Congress and of the Administration when they approach the problem of taxes? Is it to devise all possible inducements to bring private industry and private capital to the service of the national defense? Not at all. Their prime concern is to make laws which limit the profits of those who work for defense more rigidly than the profits of those who work for the ordinary commercial market.

This state of mind is a hangover from the days when a naive but pernicious propaganda had branded the armament makers as merchants of death and Congress felt it to be its duty to discourage and penalize the firms who take armament contracts. But now that the national defense is our main business, surely the sound policy is not to penalize, but if anything to favor, those who work for the government rather than carry on business as usual. And that would mean, it seems to me, that the provisions in regard to amortization and the schedules as to taxation of earnings should be framed with a view to offering a premium to those who accept defense contracts and expand facilities for producing armaments. Indeed, if later we are driven to an even greater program of defense, it will be necessary to discourage by penalty taxes and other devices many commercial activities which use labor and materials that may then be needed for defense.

TAX LAWS of this kind need not and should not breed a class of war profiteers. The income tax is an instrument which is always available to suppress this evil, especially if we realize clearly what we really wish to accomplish. We do not wish, or ought not to wish, to capture earnings which are efficiently reinvested in plants that serve the national defense. These earnings do not enrich individuals, except temporarily on paper, but they do strengthen the Nation's productive capacity. What we ought to reach through taxes are excessive incomes distributed to private persons, also incomes derived from luxurious and unnecessary commercial enterprises, and accumulated earnings which are not invested in the national defense.

What we should not do is to tax especially those who work for the government when in fact our main object is to induce the rapid expansion of the defense industries.

Fair Enough

A Musician's Life

BY WAY OF TRYING to understand the problems of the poor, innocent, ill-paid puckerface who shoves sweet wind through a horn in a band you should realize that he is not only subject to the rules of a union dictator whose powers are defended as "absolute," but cabined, cribbed, confined, by regulations and penalties of so large and devious meaning that the printing of them, in small type, occupies 285 pages. They are so complicated that the key, or index, to the constitution, which is comparatively terse, occupying only 11½ pages, is 4½ pages long, and the index to the bylaws covers 83 pages.

Properly to understand the conditions to which he subjects himself in joining the American Federation of Musicians the victim would require a legal mind and plenty of time for studious concentration. But, actually, all he needs to understand is that the president, at present Jimmy Petrillo, a Chicago politician who runs with Ed Kelly's crowd and calls himself a dictator, has authority to amend the constiution and bylaws at will.

NOT THAT SUCH powers could be supplemented, it is of gruesome interest to observe the similarity of one further constitutional provision to that law of the Nazi government which permits the court to improvise crimes and penalties in the event a defendant's conduct has not been specifically or generally anticipated in the other laws. Section E of the preamble to Article XI of the bylaws says that if a fine is not provided for any violation then the executive board may inflict a fine of $5,000 and expel the member, thus revoking his power to earn and his right to artistic expression.

Of course, the union tries to enforce its wage standards, which are good but unfortunately too good to be true, and I say for Petrillo that he derives much of his influence from a sincere belief of many members that he is always in there trying to get a dollar for them. But the union scale is so high that in many cases it cannot be met, and the result has been that union members often play for substandard wages and sign receipts for the full scale.

WHEN PLAYING on the road they are compelled to turn over 10 per cent of the standard rate of pay to the national union treasury on the theory that if they are playing substandard, which is a serious offense, they will be so miserably poor that they will simply chuck it. However, even saxophonists must eat, however badly, so the boys do play for little wages and do contribute to the union 10 per cent of the wages they are supposed to be getting. That is much more than 10 per cent of their actual pay.

In addition to this, they must hold the union's traveling card, which costs $2 a month and permits them to play in the territory of locals other than their own, but only on condition that they pay any existing differential in local dues and any taxes or assessments peculiar to the local in whose territory they are playing for peanuts.

But these are only intimations of the man-trap nature of the laws by which the tooters live and the price they pay. The poor ones probably would be a little better without a union and the better or luckier members would have to accept less money and take their chances on the collection of that in a trade which operates to a large extent in the purlieus of the underworld and which is notorious for the nasty cunning of its entrepreneurs and piece men. There is need for a union all right, but this is a union that is run by big shots who long ago forgot that they were the servants of the rank and file and set themselves up as their masters. It tyrannizes and grinds their bones.

JUST ONE MORE item, before I run to set the table and put on the vegetables.

A union man naturally wants to know what he can and can't do so that he won't incur a fine or expulsion innocently. Well, a member charged with violation of sections 9 or 10 of article XIII, or any provision of article XIV, is subject to certain procedure and penalties, and naturally the member wants to know what these sections and articles say. So he turns to them and finds that sections 9 and 10 of article XIII cover ten pages and article XIV eight and one-half pages of fine print, and then goes to the kitchen of his little flat, turns on the gas and sticks his head in the oven.

His recommendation of last June that our ports be thrown open to the British fleet is not without possible urgency today, says Mark Sullivan in his article on this page today

Churchill's Address

'The Tough Fiber Of The Londoner'

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast from London today, as transcribed by the Associated Press, follows:

When I said in the House of Commons the other day that I thought it improbable that the enemy's air attack in September could be more than three times as great as it was in August, I was not, of course, referring to barbarous attacks on the civil population, but to the great air battle which is being fought out between our fighters and the German air force.

You will understand that whenever the weather is favorable waves of German bombers, protected by fighters, often three or four hundred at a time, fly over this island, especially the promontory of Kent, in the hope of attacking military and other objectives by daylight.

However, they are met by our fighter squadrons, and nearly always broken up, and their losses average three to one in machines and six to one in pilots.

THIS EFFORT of the Germans to secure daylight mastery of the air over England is of course the crux of the whole war so far, and it has failed conspicuously. It has cost them very dear, and we have felt stronger and are actually relatively a good deal stronger than when the hard fighting began in July.

There is no doubt that Herr Hitler is using up his fighter force at a very high rate and that if he goes on for many more weeks he will wear down and ruin a vital part of his air force.

That will give us a very great advantage.

On the other hand, for him to try to invade this country without having secured mastery in the air would be a very hazardous undertaking.

Nevertheless, all his preparations for invasion on a great scale are steadily going forward.

SEVERAL HUNDRED self-propelled barges are moving down the coast of Europe from the German and Dutch harbors to the ports of northern France, from Dunkerque to Brest and beyond Brest to the French harbors in the Bay of Biscay.

Besides this, convoys of merchant ships in tens and dozens are being moved through the Straits of Dover into the Channel, darting along from port to port under the protection of the new batteries which the Germans have built on the French shore.

There are now considerable gatherings of shipping in the German, Dutch, Belgian and French harbors all the way from Hamburg to Brest.

Finally there are some preparations made for ships to carry an invading force from the Norwegian harbors. Behind these clusters of ships or barges there stand very large numbers of German troops awaiting the order to go on board and set out on their very dangerous voyage across the sea.

We cannot tell when they will try to come. We cannot be sure, in fact, they will try at all, but no one should blind himself to the fact that a heavy, full-scale invasion of this island is being prepared with all of the usual German thoroughness and method, and that it may be launched at any time now upon England, upon Scotland, or upon Ireland or upon all three.

IF THIS invasion is going to be tried at all, it does not seem that it can be long delayed. The weather may break at any time. Besides this, it is difficult for the enemy to keep these gatherings of ships waiting about indefinitely while they are bombed every night by our bombers and very often shelled by our warships which are waiting for them outside.

Therefore we must regard the next week or so as a very important week for us in our history. As great as the days when the Spanish Armada was approaching the Channel, and Drake was finishing his game of bowls, or when Nelson stepped between us and Napoleon's Grand Army at Boulogne.

We've read about the English in the history books. But what is happening now is on a far greater scale, and of far more consequence to the life and future of the world and its civilization than these brave old days in the past.

Every man and woman will therefore prepare himself to do his duty, whatever it may be, with special pride and care. Our fleets are very powerful and numerous. Our air force is at the highest it has ever reached and it is conscious of its proved superiority, not, indeed, in numbers, but in men and machines.

OUR SHORES are well fortified and strongly manned, and behind them, ready to attack the invaders, we have a far larger and better equipped mobile army than we have ever had before.

Besides this, we have more than a million and a half men of the Home Guard who are just as much soldiers of the Regular Army in status as the Grenadier Guards, and all are determined to fight for every inch of the ground in every village and in every street.

It is with devout but sure confidence that I say let God defend the right. These cruel, wanton, indiscriminate bombings of London are of course a part of Hitler's invasion plan. He hopes by killing large numbers of civilians and women and children that he will terrorize and cow the people of this mighty imperial city and make them a burden and anxiety to the government, and thus distract our attention unduly from the ferocious onslaught he is preparing.

Little does he know the spirit of the British nation or the tough figer of the Londoner whose forebears played a leading part in the establishment of parliamentary institutions and who have been bred to value freedom far above their lives.

THIS WICKED man, the repository and embodiment of many forms of soul-destroying hatred, this monstrous product of former wrongs and shame has now resolved to try to break our famous island race by a process of indiscriminate slaughter and destruction.

What he has done is to kindle a fire in British hearts here and all over the world which will glow long after all traces of the conflagration he has caused in London has been removed. He has lighted a fire which will burn with a steady and consuming flame until the last vestige of Nazi tyranny have been burnt out of Europe and until the Old World and the New can join hands to rebuild the temples of man's freedom and man's honor upon foundations which will not soon or easily be overthrown.

This is a time for everyone to stand together and hold firm, as they are doing. I express my admiration for the exemplary manner in which all the air raid precaution services of London are being discharged, especially the fire brigades whose work has been so heavy and also dangerous.

ALL THE WORLD that is still free marvels at the composure and fortitude with which the citizens of London are facing and surmounting the great ordeal to which they are subjected, the end of which or the severity of which cannot yet be foreseen.

It is a message of good cheer to our fighting forces on the seas, in the air and in our waiting armies in all their posts and station that we send them from this capital city.

They know that they have behind them a people who will not flinch or weary of the struggle, hard and protracted through it will be, but that we shall rather draw from the heart of suffering itself the means of inspiration and survival.

And of a victory won not only for ourselves but for all; a victory won not only for our time but for the long and better days that are to come.

Enforced Course

By Mark Sullivan

Events In Europe to Guide U. S.

INCREASED intensity of German attack upon England brings the United States to another stage of its own course about the war. What our next step will be is not a matter of conscious calculation by us. We can predict in part—but we can only predict what the United States will do by first predicting what will happen in Europe. Our whole course about the war is not a course which we choose. It is not a course which men plan far in advance. It is a course forced upon us. Successive stages of the battling in Europe force upon us successive stages of necessity. To realize this, follow events of the past five months:

April 9, Germany seized Denmark. That meant, Geormany got rights—"rights" or whatever you call it—to Denmark's American colony, Greenland. At once we realized the war was brought nearer to us—Germany, if in possession of Greenland, could descend upon Canada and upon us. We were mildly concerned, but did nothing. We did nothing because we still complacently assumed that Germany would be beaten by Britain and France. Then Germany would be ousted from Denmark. We would not need to worry about Greenland.

Then, May 10, came Germany's next step in conquest—and our next step in awakening. In early May, Germany entered and conquered Holland. By that, Germany got rights to Holland's colonies in the Caribbean. That came closer home to us—for these Holland possessions were close to our Panama Canal. We stirred in our sleep, but did not completely wake up.

So far, all that Germany had got was a conqueror's rights to the Danish and Holland colonies in the Western Hemisphere. She could not exercise those rights, could not take physical possession of these colonies, until she conquered the British fleet. And we continued to assume that Germany would not conquer the British fleet. Britain and France, we thought, would defeat or successfully resist Germany. The British fleet would continue to keep Germany away from the American hemisphere. We continued to drowse.

Our next step in emergence from somnolence came about mid-June. Germany conquered France. Alarmingly it occurred to us, Germany might now conquer England. If Germany, by conquering England, got possession of the British fleet, we would stand naked to Hitler's sword. It would be the same if the British fleet were destroyed or scuttled as an incident of the final fighting.

In that event Germany, with her own fleet, and with what she might get of the British fleet, and with the control she already had of the French fleet, and with the Italian fleet, and with command of all the shipbuilding facilities in Europe — Germany, thus equipped, could come and take possession of all the British, French and Dutch colonies near our shores. Further than that, Germany thus equipped, might if she chose, make an immediate attack upon the United States, directly or by way of Canada or Latin America.

Comprehension of that woke us up. Comprehension of that led to the alarmed hurry of preparedness which we began in June, including conscription, the mutual defense pact with Canada, and other steps not yet fully developed.

Comprehension of that possibility—that the British fleet might be captured or destroyed or scuttled—was the genesis of the arrangement we recently concluded with Britain. The more specific features of that arrangement are generally understood, the 50 destroyers and the naval bases.

Another feature was not included in the formal agreement, because this was not a contract but only a voluntary undertaking by Britain, a declaration of policy by her. It was first made by Prime Minister Churchill on June 4. It read:

"If, during the course of this present war . . . the water surrounding the British Isles should become untenable for British ships of war, the British fleet would in no event be surrendered or sunk, but would be sent overseas for the defense of other parts of the empire."

Subsequently, Secretary of State Hull formally inquired if this statement "represents the settled policy of the British government." British Ambassador Lord Lothian replied that it "certainly did . . ."

That is a pregnant declaration. Almost certainly it is to Canada that the British fleet, or most of it, would be sent. And Canada has neither ports to harbor all the fleet, nor financial capacity to support it. Quite likely the fleet would come to United States ports. Already, on June 17, before the situation became acute, present Secretary of War Stimson recommended that our ports be thrown open to the British fleet.

In the possibility—which is a possibility only but which prudence must take into account—of the island of England being conquered, it seems probable the British fleet and our own would cooperate, in defense of us, and of the remaining parts of the British Empire. And the cooperation would be more than merely naval.

O'Mahoney Denies U. S. Plans To Curb Life Insurance Firms

Philadelphia, Sept. 11 (AP).—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), chairman of the Federal Monopoly Committee, told the American Bar Association today there was no move for Federal regulation of life insurance companies.

His statement was in reply to an assertion by J. Reuben Clark, jr., a former Assistant Secretary of State and Ambassador to Mexico, that any such regulation would be a "potential threat" to democracy.

Clark, first counsellor of the Church of Latter-day Saints, Salt Lake City, expressed concern at the Bar Association's sixty-third convention that the Government might "take over life insurance as a Federal activity."

Neither the Monopoly Committee nor any affiliated agency, Senator O'Mahoney declared, "has ever recommended or suggested any legislation providing for Federal regulation of insurance."

Clark said regulation or absorption of the life insurance business by the Government "could be the beginning of dictatorship and despotism."

In reply, Senator O'Mahoney said the conception and procedure of the Monopoly Committee is devoted "to the defense of free enterprise."

Meanwhile, Edward C. Baily, of New York, cosponsor of a resolution opposing a Presidential third term, announced he would try to introduce the resolution at tomorrow's general convention session. The Resolutions Committee modified the proposal yesterday by approving only a section indorsing a single six-year term.

"This is no time to pussyfoot when a President is making a serious attempt for reelection a second time," Bailly said. "The revised resolution is for future use only. We're confronted with the present."

Four delegates were elected to the house of delegates of the Bar Association. They were: Paul F. Hanna, Washington; Judge J. R. Keaton, Oklahoma City; John Parry Wood, Los Angeles, and Joseph W. Henderson, Philadelphia.

Francis Biddle, United States Solicitor General, said that the United States has reached the stage where "weary of talk, the national psychology will . . . constantly demand shorter cuts to reach the goal of national defense."

In an address for delivery before the section of criminal law Biddle warned that greater concentration of authority in the President, necessary to speed up national defense, is "dangerous, perilous, if you will, to our free institutions," but declared:

"So long as the people through their own Congress and their courts retain the right to withdraw the power they have granted, just so long the democratic way persists. . . . Risk is inherent to swift and vigorous action."

Dinners Given by Ambassador Lothian And Mrs. Lionel Atwill Hold Spotlight

Several Members of Congress Among Guests Of British Envoy; Actor's Wife Gives Large Affair in Honor of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman

By Hope Ridings Miller

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

Small and informal, but nevertheless worthy of special note was the dinner given by the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian. Larger and more glittering was the fete given by Mrs. Lionel Atwill in honor of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway.

Several members of Congress were among Lord Lothian's guests. Another party on the British Embassy calendar this week is the dinner planned in honor of Keith Officer, retiring Australian counselor, who will leave the latter part of this month for his new post in Tokyo.

Parties for Mr. Officer are piling up on all sides. The Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey will give a cocktail party for him tomorrow, and dinner on September 19. Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck also will give a small farewell cocktail fete for him. He will leave for the West Coast by plane September 20.

A part of the Mayflower Hotel's cocktail lounge was taken over for Mrs. Atwill's party last night. The guests found their places at small tables—some for four, some for six—and were entertained during dinner and afterward by "The Jubilee Singers."

The Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, was ranking guest in a company of around 30, including seven Senators and a sizable number of other notables. Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator William H. King, Senator George L. Radcliffe and Senator Richard B. Russell were there; also, Senator Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach and Representative Thomas C. Hennings, jr.

Still others at the gay get together were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert Danford, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, Father Joseph Code, former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, George T. Summerlin, of the State Department; Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Donald Jones, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer and Miss Evalyn McLean.

Also receiving a special invitation to the fete was the hostess' brother, James H. R. Cromwell, New Jersey Senatorial candidate. Mrs. Atwill will leave tomorrow for the West Coast to join her husband, the well-known actor. She hopes to return later to take a house in Georgetown for the winter.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles returned to their Oxon Hill home yesterday after a vacation in Bar Harbor, Me. . . . Back in their Spring Valley home are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, and their daughter, Eloise, who closed their Spring Valley home for the first time on July 20. Since then, they have visited in Butte, Mont., spent some time in Jasper Park, Canada, and stopped over with friends in San Francisco. Mr. Richberg's latest book, "G. Hovah Explains," is attracting wide interest . . . Just where they will move the day after tomorrow Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Samuel O. Clark do not know, but they plan to cart bag and baggage out of the place they have been occupying on Goldsborough Road for the past year. After an extended vacation in the West, they returned to town last week, and were no sooner settled than they were visited by a burglar who made off with some of Mrs. Clark's most valued possessions. Now, they are hunting for a house in a less secluded section. And, as I said before, they are moving Saturday.

Mrs. Garrett and Miss Darlington have spent the summer in Maine. The latter was presented to society at a dance given on Long Island in June by Mrs. Clarkson, and is expected to bow here at a ball in November at the Sulgrave Club.

Washingtonians Begin Fall Trek Back to Capital

Capitalites seem to be closing summer homes earlier than usual this year and already many members of society have returned to the Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Warren are here again after several months in Southampton. Also returned are Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, who are at their home on the Rockville pike after a summer at Hot Springs, Va.

Countess de Baillet Latour returned yesterday after a visit with her mother, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, at Manchester on the Massachusetts North Shore. The Countess plans to take a house in Georgetown this winter. For the past few months she and her two little children have been living with Mr. and Mrs. Dunn.

About the Town

—with Dudley Harmon

DEFENSE DATA: Thousands of letters pour into the defense commission from people who want to "do something." They offer everything from a gold mine to an idea. Women are just as eager to help as men. But one toiler in the information office was startled the other day when a nice, ladylike voice inquired over the telephone, "Could somebody come out and show us how to make hand grenades?"

DUDLEY HARMON

ONE OF THE commission divisions is called "aromatics and aliphatics." Many of the personnel haven't yet figured that one out.

Among the new workers at the commission is Daniel Hoan, who was for many years Socialist Mayor of Milwaukee. At one point in his career Mr. Hoan was second dishwasher at Rector's Restaurant in New York.

*Another is Leo Rosten, creator of the famous H*y*m*a*n K*a*p*l*a*n series. Mr. Rosten, whose pen name is Leonard Q. Ross, once actually conducted an Americanization class for foreigners in Chicago. But he says he will write no more Kaplan articles, as they are "too difficult."*

Among the women defense workers is Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, who is with Miss Harriet Elliott. Mrs. Cunningham was a vigorous campaigner for suffrage in the old days and once ran for the Senate from Texas.

If the collective health of the Defense Commission breaks down this winter, it will doubtless be because they have become a group of sandwich munchers. The pressure of work is so great that they hardly ever get time for a square meal until evening.

IN THIS RAPIDLY changing world, even debutantes are beginning to want to be useful as well as ornamental. Among those who wish to be prepared to make a living is Mariana Evans. She has left to enter Simmons College in Boston, where girls are taught a profession.

SO WIDELY SCATTERED are European families by the war that sometimes one wonders how they will ever all get together again. The van Troostenburgs, formerly with the Netherlands Legation here, are now in London and their daughter is in Holland. They are reported not to have heard a word from her. In Berlin when his country was invaded, Mr. van Troostenburg was advised that if he returned to Holland, he would not be considered an enemy of Germany, but that if he went to London, he would. The diplomat considered it his duty to follow his government to England . . . The lady in waiting who accompanied Crown Princess Martha here brought her youngest child along. Another son and daughter are in Norway, and her husband is in London with Crown Prince Olav . . . Oscar Crosby's daughter, Countess di Melito, wonders how she can join her husband in Italy. The Italian diplomat has just reached there after trying since last June. He was stationed in South Africa and it was first thought, when Italy declared war, that the Italians there would have to be shipped via Rio de Janeiro. But the fall of France opened up passage on the Mediterranean. The countess has been with her family in Warrenton for several months.

ONE EFFECT of the war on Washington is the cancellation of the annual International Horse Show. The South American teams who usually participate sent word that the situation was too serious to come all that distance for a sporting event.

Robert Blisses Fete Friends In State Dept.

Mrs. Harriman Receives With Hostess At Dumbarton Oaks

Receiving under the great trees that gave Dumbarton Oaks its name, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss greeted their host of State Department friends at a garden tea yesterday afternoon at their historic Georgetown home.

Mrs. J. Bordon Harriman, gowned smartly in black with a silver fox neckpiece, stood in line with Mrs. Bliss, who was wearing a tailored beige dress set off with accents of green, which was repeated in her hat.

Although it was too cool for the guests to take advantage of the swimming facilities, many of them found that the flagstone paths led through beautiful woods and gardens, the existence of which seems almost unbelievable in urban Washington.

Eventually, though, all guests found their way to the front lawn. There long tables were set with an infinite variety of sandwiches and cakes, and sauterne punch and pineapple sherbet were served from large bowls.

Heading the list of State Department notables at the affair were Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull, who was dressed in a navy blue frock with white accessories.

Also there were United States Minister to Denmark, Ray Atherton; special assistants to the Secretary of State, Lynn Edminster and Leo Pasvolsky, the latter with his wife, and Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, political adviser on Far Eastern affairs.

Mrs. Frederick Livesay, Mrs. Henry Deimel and her daughter, and Mrs. Wallace McClure, were among the hundreds of others who enjoyed the beauty of the Bliss gardens and hospitality.

Girl, 16, Tells Boy of 18 That He's Too Young To Interest Her; Can He Change Her Viewpoint?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been in love with a girl for two years, and during this time, I have gone out with her only three times, although I have asked her for dozens of dates. I am 18 years old now, and she is 16. I finally mustered the courage to ask her why she turned me down so often, and to my bewilderment, she told me I am too young for her; that she would rather go out with boys of 20 and 21. She has been carefully reared, without much contact with the world, and she claims this has made her more mature than most young people her own age.

On thinking this over, I can see that if boys of 20 and 21 take her out, they must think an awful lot of her. But, on the other hand, what kind of fellows that age would want to go with a girl so much younger? It seems to me there must be something wrong with them, or they would be interested in, and attractive to, girls their own age. This girl's parents let her use her own judgment in choosing her friends.

I have been told that girls in their teens always pass through a period of wanting to go out with older fellows, and finally come back to boys their own age. Is that true? And should I just hang on, hoping she will get around to me finally? Or should I try to forget her? I am taking it very hard, as I really am in love with her. It has lasted two years, so I'm sure it is the real thing. I have changed from a "slob" to a well-dressed, well-mannered boy since knowing her; but I am afraid my school work is going to suffer if I can't win her friendship. Please advise me.

A. W. H.

Best Forget Her For a Few Years

DEAR A. H. W.: I believe it is true that the majority of popular teen-age girls think it more exciting to have college-age beaux, than to pal around with boys their own age. I suppose it is because the older fellows have been around more, as the phrase goes; have learned better how to please and compliment a girl, while yet talking down to her in "older man" fashion, and (in her opinion) make a more impressive social appearance.

Why should boys of 20 or 21 want to go with a girl of 16? Only because she was unusually good looking or exceptionally good company, I should say. The average boy around that age (of an intelligence and social experience suited to his years) would regard the typical 16-year-old girl as a child, compared to his gray-beard self; unless, as I say, she had magnetic social gifts and an appearance that matched.

However, once a girl of 16 had caught the fancy of an older boy, it is likely she would get in circulation in his crowd, which naturally would include other boys his age. And when these had become her friends, she probably would feel that their interests were her interests, and that she was years ahead of high school boys in outlook and social experience. I am sorry to say there is no guarantee that she will later drop back into step with younger fellows. It is more logical to think she would continue to prefer, and to attract, beaux four or five years older than herself.

With regard to yourself and this girl, I think you should by all means leave her out of your social calculations for a couple of years. During that time, turn your attention to other girls. Play the field, and through continuous association with many girls, learn all you can about feminine nature and how to handle it. By the time you are 20 and she is 18, if girls and "dating" have become an old story with you, you can meet her on common ground, and sell yourself to her with skill and aplomb. (That is, if you are still in love with her, which you probably won't be.)

Man Voices Apology And Appreciation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just read your reply, of September 8, to my letter, which you published under the heading: "Man Questions Girl's 'Decency,' Since She Refused to Marry Him After Accepting His Lovemaking." After studying your remarks, I agree with you that I have been a cad, and I want you to know that I am beginning to see the girl's actions in a different light.

I realize now that I lost her because of my cheapness and ignorance. It surely has been a lesson to me. I realize it is impossible to win her back, but I hope some day to be able to convince her that my blundering was due to ignorance.

Frankly, Miss Haworth, I didn't think much of your column until now—when I am sincere in saying that your advice to me is very beneficial and greatly appreciated. I believe the girl reads your column, and if you consider this a sufficient apology to her, I would like you to print it.

H. K.

Misunderstanding All Around

DEAR H. K.: It begins to look as if this had been a case of misunderstanding all around. You are a better sportsman and a greater gentleman than either the girl or I would have supposed, when judging your quality by your earlier attitude. I hope you win her back. I believe you deserve her.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Small Flat May Be Decorated Effectively on Limited Budget

Miss Sophie August, interior decorator (inset), plans an attractive one-room budget apartment. In accompanying picture she chose the color scheme from the print hanging over love seat. The floor covering is jade green and draperies are Shetland woodrose and jade novelty plaid cotton. The wood cornice is the same neutral color as woodwork and walls. The love seat which can be made into a bed is covered in a smart beige and wood-rose striped cotton damask

Careful Planning Necessary, Points Out Sophie August, Authority on Making Tiny Home Unit Express Individuality

By Martha Ellyn

"IF SOME decorators would get off their high horses and do some serious thinking about small houses and one-room apartments, I do believe they would blaze a new trail."

Martha Ellyn

This rather revolutionary statement comes from Miss Sophie August, a newcomer to Washington in the interior decoration field. She feels that there is nothing extremely difficult about furnishing a mezzanine apartment with drawing room, master bedroom, and the like, when there is a decorator and unlimited resources. But she does think it takes real planning to make attractive homes of the small units—one, two and three room apartments, such as many Washingtonians inhabit.

Miss August is a disciple of Paul Frenkel, noted interior decorator, who originated the idea of a room expressing the owner's personality. Coming East to Washington from Palm Springs, Calif., Miss August finds the problem of decoration quite different from those of the West Coast.

Not For You, but With You

This decorator says that Mr. and Mrs. America know the effect that they would like to achieve, but they do not know exactly how to go about it. "That is where the decorator should act as an advisory counsel," says Miss August, "for the clever decorator acts as a guide. She doesn't plan your home for you, but with you." Never should a decorator dictate, but should advise, according to Miss August. She thinks it would be a monotonous world if we all lived in the same type of house, furnished in the same fashion.

Like an architect draws a blue print, so the decorator plans your room to fit your need—to personify you—and above all, to make one feel at home in your own home. She also has found that it is the ultimate desire of every person to be known as a person of good taste and discretion by all who cross their threshold. We work in a modern world and it is restful for most of us to come home to an eighteenth-century contrast.

In the accompanying living-room picture Miss August shows what can be done to effect a lovely room—on a budget. Given the average neutral walls usually found in Washington apartments, you can base your color scheme on a number of things. The colors chosen for this room were based on those found in the charming print hanging on the wall over the love seat.

The rug is jade green, the ceiling draperies are of Shetland, wood rose and jade, plaid and novelty cotton. The wood cornice can easily be made, due to its simple design. It is of the same neutral color of woodwork and walls. The love seat, which can be made into a bed, is covered in a smart beige and wood-rose striped cotton damask. The cart-wheel pillows are canary yellow, edged with jade green moss.

The two occasional chairs are upholstered in a neutral linen and the flowers are in shades of yellow with jade green leaves. The floor lamp has a crystal standard and the shade is of natural raw silk edged in wood-rose moss. The fern stand is of mahogany, while the vase on it is of clear crystal. The Sheraton mahogany cocktail table holds a glass vase that looks like an oversize tumbler. The desk secretary is a fine copy of an original museum piece, hand rubbed, finished in antique mahogany. The accompanying chair is Early American style, of wood, painted black, with a canary tie-on seat cover.

The lounge chair is beige cotton, flecked with wood rose, with shaggy moss edge. Beside the chair is a side table with a shelf for magazines. The three-paneled screen conceals an inexpensive unpainted chest, upon which is a small electric stove with an oven compartment. The console table against the wall can be made to different sizes. An Eighteenth-century gold-leaf mirror hangs over the table.

Remember the Man of House

In selecting furniture, never sacrifice comfort for style, warns Miss August, for therein lies the secret of clever decoration. Never furnish above your budget if you want a harmonious interior. If there are several members of your family, keep them in mind, too, when furnishing, for it is their living quarters, too. The man of the house should have a comfortable chair and beside it there should be a table high enough to support a good reading lamp and large enough for smoking paraphernalia and newspapers.

Miss August also advises that a son or daughter should be consulted about their ideas when furnishing a room for them. Let children help plan the rooms and choose the furniture that appeals to them. A child's own special domain is just the place for entertaining its playmates. Pictures of heroes, movie stars, football idols, and the like, all means much to youngsters.

Edgy Nerves Danger Signal For Dieters

By Ida Jean Kain

IT USED to be that you could more or less expect an edgy disposition when you went on a diet, but now it's taken as a warning signal. If you have a pretty good disposition to start with and you lose it on your diet, you are on the wrong diet. You are not getting everything you need. Sooner or later such an inadequate diet will actually harm your health.

One of the first points to check is the vitamin B 1 in your diet. This vitamin is essential to the normal functioning of the nervous system. Also, when your exercise is stepped up, the need for the vitamin is increased, for the greater the activity the greater the requirement.

Vitamin Not Easy

It is not easy to get adequate vitamin B 1 on a reducing diet—or on any other diet, for that matter—because of our extensive use of refined flours and cereals. All the bread and cereals included in the reducer's menu must be of the whole grain variety, as otherwise there is almost certain to be a vitamin B deficiency.

If your caloric intake must be restricted to 1,000 a day or under in order to lose, it is barely possible to keep the vitamin B up to normal. In a number of clinics, this deficiency is made up by having the reducers take four ounces of tomato juice with two level teaspoons of dried brewer's yeast twice a day. This additional vitamin B helps the reducer to maintain optimal health.

Also, it may be that you are not getting enough iron. This mineral is a sure cure for crankiness. You do not need much in the diet but that little bit is vitally important. Even on an ordinary mixed diet, you sometimes have to go out of your way to include enough of this precious mineral

Itching Foot

She—This old refrigerator makes me sick.

He—What's the matter with it?

She—Well, it's only an old Arctic. Everybody has the Antarctic now. Ethel Flitt says over at Strutt Gardens——

He—Strutt Gardens! I thought they lived at Gilded Mansions.

He—Again!

She—Well, they've been at Gilded Mansions a whole year now. Besides, everybody's trying to get into Strutt Gardens.

He—I don't see why.

She—Well, it's brand new for one thing. And all the bathrooms are in black tile with sunken tubs, and they have the Corinthian foyers with cathedral chimes.

He—I wouldn't think they'd be fool enough to move for that.

He—Say, this place was just built last year!

She—I know it, but there's an ordinary class of people moving in already. Take that new woman across the hall. WHO is that man who comes there? And yesterday I noticed a couple with THREE children looking at that corner apartment.

He—Say, you're not trying to move again!

She—Oh no, but I think a person ought to keep their eyes open. Now just by looking around Julie Flitt found that marvelous apartmen at the Marie Antoinette.

He—Are they moving TOO?

She—Yes, they can't stand those radiators at Midas Place any longer. At the Marie Antoinette it's all recessed radiation. And they're going to have a kitchen with glass bricks and a little dinette with Sodom and Tyre murals——

He—How are they going to pay for all that?

She—Well, it's only a little more and of course they'll save a lot because they'll eat more at home. Besides, you do get in an awful rut at one place . . . Oh, and another thing, the Trumpits are moving back to Rococco Towers.

He—But they just moved out!

She—That was a year ago, and they've redecorated the place in red, white and blue. Everything's patriotic now. The kitchen is simply adorable—it has a blue, mottled linoleum and a white stove with red handles. And the bathroom has a blue shower curtain with white stars and a red medicine cabinet.

He—Margie Trumpit would fall for that.

She—Of course, though, a lot of people are going into this new Hacienda Plaza. Everything's Pan-American there, and of course that's going to be the newest note in decoration. And there's a wonderful patio lobby with a fountain——

He—You haven't been there!

She—We-l-l, I just stopped in with Daphne Dabbler to see their new apartment. Everybody's moving there—the Joe Dithers . . . and the Mark Stepps . . . and the Clarence Mushers. It's terribly convenient. There's a little gift shop next door . . . and an antique shop . . . and an interior decorating shop. As a matter of fact, I really like it better than Strutt Gardens.

He—Say, what are you getting at?

She—Oh, nothing. It's just that when I was over there with Julie the man showed me this one little apartment that's not taken. It has a mezzanine foyer . . . and this new indirect fluorescent lighting all in rose, for the fireplace . . . and—and while I know we don't want to move or anything, I was thinking you might—well, you might enjoy stopping by there tonight just to look at it ——

He—Say, why didn't you say what you meant in the first place?

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

AMONG the women who telephoned Rowena Farrar when her Commerce Department story, "Office Baby," appeared in the September Ladies' Home Journal was a Government worker who told her, "The background was so real it made me cry."

Rowena Farrar

The tribute repaid Mrs. Farrar for much careful study of the ways of the Government. "Most of my stories are based on fact," she says. "I learned something about the subject during a two months' job as Senator's secretary which I took for that purpose.

"Then I have friends in the Government who tell me about situations which arise in their office.

"I think lots of problems in the life of a Federal Employe lend themselves to fiction. Can a woman have a baby and still keep her job? That's the theme of 'Office Baby.' Then there's the woman approaching retirement age who sees younger girls coming in to take her place, and the cases where men are brought in to fill the jobs women really deserve."

As for the Man problem, she feels Washington's career girls have found wholesome ways of combatting the lamentable shortage of male companionship. "New York office workers overemphasize the importance of clothes and smart appearance," she finds. "Women here are just as interested in sports, music and university courses. When they marry they bring more to their homes than an elaborate wardrobe."

Awakened in the early hours by sounds in the nursery, a mother called sleepily to her young son, "What are you doing?" "Lookin' at the fire engine," was his reply. "Take it to bed with you and go to sleep," the conversation continued. His answering wail, "I CAN'T," brought her out of bed and to the nursery window. Smoked poured out of the house next door, and a hook-and-ladder truck stood in the driveway.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE—Visiting her family's home in Virginia recently, a Washington woman called on an ancient colored woman of her acquaintance. She noticed a flock of rather sickly poultry and asked, "How are your chickens doing, Martha?" "Just fine," Martha replied philosophically, "except for them as are dying so fast."

USELESS INFORMATION—The average human walks about 65,000 miles a lifetime. . . . Women's body temperature is generally lower than men, sometimes by as much as 4 degrees, says the Harvard School of Public Health.

Beauty Secrets

How to Shampoo Correctly

For a long time I silently admired the sheen of a woman's hair. Always it looked alive and soft. The other day I asked her point blank for her secret.

"I've used the same shampoo and the same method of applying it for 10 years," she replied. I found it to be the technique and product of a scalp specialist who holds a 40-year's experience record in correcting hair troubles.

Thereupon I went to this specialist's salon and bombarded her with questions about the correct method of shampooing.

Here are a few facts she gave me about the care of the hair.

The first step toward healthy, beautiful hair is cleanliness—real cleanliness. Each hair of your head (and you have about 100,000) grows out of a tiny V-shaped depression in your scalp. These depressions are the catch-alls that collect dust and oil from the glands of your scalp. Ordinary washing will not clean them. In fact, soap that contains too much alkali merely hardens these collections into little plugs that choke off normal hair growth. You can get your hair really clean if you will follow these simple directions:

First, wet your hair with tepid water. Pour on about a half or one ounce of shampoo, if your hair is thick and sticky. Work into a lather, massaging your whole scalp gently with your fingertips. Rinse thoroughly with warm water, sprayed on if possible. Repeat the process, using about half as much shampoo as the first time.

The 90 million Americans who may go to work for Hitler

SOUTH of the isthmus of Panama, like a fat pear hanging upside down from a slender stem, lies a continent inhabited by 90 million people—South Americans who may have to work for Hitler.

Already the conqueror is reaching greedily for the South American pear. Already the Nazi advance agents crawl over it like beetles... searching out the soft spots... nibbling at morale... burrowing tunnels underneath the surface.

▶ Whether these moves by Nazi Germany mean Blitzkrieg or Handelskrieg—military thrust or trade war—they promise to put Uncle Sam on perhaps the hottest spot of his career.

For although the Americas have, of late years, given the "Good neighbor" idea more than lip-service, they are off to a late start. The two continents in this hemisphere have, for centuries, drawn their oceans about them like blankets... have had for each other that distrust which has its roots in ignorance.

Now, with the clock of Europe striking the eleventh hour, once again it appears that ignorance—like crime—does not pay.

▶ Colombia, with its two-ocean seacoast... Venezuela, teeming with oil... Ecuador, whose Galápagos Islands command the Southern approach to the Panama Canal... Bolivia, which may have to become sole U. S. source of tin ... Argentina, Europe's potential breadbasket ... Brazil, bigger than the 48 United States and four-fifths as large as Europe...

Through no act of its own, every one of these nations has, overnight, become a potential powder keg under Uncle Sam. With the U. S. still unprepared, with a two-ocean Navy four to six years away, there is good reason for furrowed brows in Washington.

▶ Should we give up hope? Watch the South American stars drawn into the Nazi constellation? See our trade arteries severed and our life blood drained away?

No. For, in addition to the moves being made in Washington, there exist forces which can help thwart the Nazi pull of gravity. These forces are the newspapers of both continents.

▶ Peru's El Comercio—101-year-old daily... Chile's El Mercurio—founded in 1827... Argentina's La Nación, La Critica, and the great La Prensa, one of the most influential newspapers in the world... Brazil's Portuguese-language Correio da Manhã... are newspapers of which any nation could be proud.

And since the Nazi hordes poured into Holland, South American papers have stepped up their U. S. news. The Brazilian or Argentine newsreader can now discuss the Third Term issue as intelligently as he can the Havana conference. Even U. S. comic strips are a daily feature. Popeye the Sailor caused a near-crisis in the spinach market.

▶ But what's true south of the isthmus is less true north of it. The average U. S. newsreader, business man, industrialist, knows less about Buenos Aires or Rio, than he knows about Berlin or Battle Creek. But he wants to know more! The U. S. press is now recognizing that it is faced with a tremendous challenge—the discovery of South America.

There are signs that progressive papers, large and small, are accepting this challenge. Crack correspondents—men like William Simms of Scripps-Howard; Walter B. Kerr Jr., of the N. Y. Herald Tribune, and Wayne Thomis of the Chicago Tribune, have been—or soon will be—filing stories direct from the trouble spots. Throughout the country, AP and UP South American dispatches are finding their way into print, instead of into Editors' wastebaskets.

▶ And the Weekly Newsmagazine, as the national U. S. newspaper, is in the forefront of this march of enlightenment.

Staff correspondents, researchers, and photographers for the entire TIME family—TIME, LIFE, FORTUNE, and the MARCH OF TIME movie—have all helped to build up a remarkable reservoir of South American facts, contacts, and first-hand experience.

This invaluable background constantly enriches TIME's news from the southern continent. And now TIME is further increasing its coverage... opening a new office in Buenos Aires, expanding its staff in Rio... digging for more and fuller stories from every Latin-American city.

▶ Moreover, TIME's news wires run both ways. TIME now supplies U. S. news to selected South American papers—news that, in these grave new days, makes important headlines.

True words and straight facts are weapons—weapons to be turned against ignorance, indifference, and fear. TIME is supplying these true words and straight facts in a battle unaccompanied by gunfire—but as critical to the U. S. as Saratoga or Gettysburg.

In these days of crisis, the free press is more than ever a vital force in making our democracy a living, working success. Therefore, TIME is seeking, in this series of advertisements, to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of what the press in general, and TIME in particular, are doing to keep the people of this nation safe, strong, free, and united.

Draft Registry Aid Mapped by D.C. Schools

Classes Would Close Day So Teachers Can Help Officials

Public schools would be closed for one day to allow use of buildings, and teachers may be assigned as registrars, according to tentative plans for draft registration in the District, the Board of Education was informed yesterday.

Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, at the board's first meeting of the fall, submitted the tentative program which will be submitted to the commissioners for approval.

The proposal is for the use of 38 public school buildings, one white and one colored, in each of 19 divisions of the city. Senior and junior high schools were selected wherever possible because the furniture is nearest to adult size, he said.

The program, on which he conferred recently with Col. C. A. Dravo, adjutant general, District National Guard, and Maj. Beverly Snow, assistant engineer commissioner, would affect the school thus:

1. All schools to be closed for one day unless registration falls on Saturday, Sunday or a legal holiday.
2. Allow teachers to be assigned to the 38 schools as registrars.
3. Superintendent to name chief registrar for each building who will select immediate assistants.
4. Service of registrars to be voluntary, as teachers cannot be paid from Federal funds.

Dr. Holmes said the possible assignment of cadet officers and men as aides to the chief registrars and as messengers in the buildings was informally discussed but not officially included in the program. Possible use of girls from business departments of the high schools to serve as clerical assistants also was discussed.

All But One Citizens

Forty-nine teachers of foreign birth are in the school system here, and all except one have been able to establish citizenship, it was reported to the board by Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent.

Mrs. Bertha G. Romero, teacher of modern languages in Central High School since October 1, 1918, is the one exception, and she is being retired, Mr. Haycock said. According to a new provision, salaries cannot be paid to teachers who are not citizens.

Mrs. Romero, who was born in France, claims that she became a citizen through the naturalization of her husband in Massachusetts in 1906, but has been unable to submit proof that he was naturalized, Mr. Haycock said.

The first compulsory five-periods-a-week classes in physical education in a senior high school here will be started in the new Calvin Coolidge High School, Dr. Holmes told the board. The principals of the expanded program was approved by the board in 1936, but lack of personnel has delayed its start.

Would Equalize Program

Robert A. Maurer, board member, said he believed that "opportunities for physical education should be equalized" and that he didn't want to see one school out of proportion to others in this respect. Pupils at other high schools customarily have two periods a week in this work.

Dr. Holmes pointed out that the start of the program was possible because Coolidge, a new school, will have a comparatively small enrollment. He said funds for personnel to expand the program there and to extend it to other schools would be sought.

The board voted to allow continued use of the Wisconsin avenue Manual Training School as the central kitchen for the preparation of school lunches for needy children, under a WPA project.

Tuition rates for nonresident students were adopted by the board, with slight variations from last session: Teachers' college, $249.75; senior high school, $111.52; junior high school, 89.78; vocational, $136.20; elementary, 64.73; vacation school, $4.42; night school, 5.97.

$9,525 to Red Cross

The public schools contributed $9,525.14 to the American Red Cross war-relief fund, Haycock reported to the board.

Miss Edith M. Williams was promoted from teaching principal of Shepherd School to administrative principal of Carbery-Ludlow School; Miss A. E. Belt from teaching principal of Stanton School to administrative principal of Brookland-Bunker Hill School, and Miss M. H. Stohlman from teaching principal of Amidon School to administrative principal of Fairbrother-Rossell School.

The Gage-Henry Polk School group and the Brookland-Bunker Hill-Noyes School group were discontinued and were rearranged into the Henry-Polk School group with 20 rooms, the Brookland-Bunker Hill School group with 16 rooms and the Gage-Noyes School group with 20 rooms.

Miss Bertha E. Taylor was transferred from administrative principal of Gage-Henry-Polk to the same position at Henry-Polk. Miss Grace Bush was transferred from administrative principal of Brookland-Bunker Hill-Noyes School to the same position at Gage-Noyes.

Langdon and Woodridge Schools were grouped together under Miss K. F. Scrivener as administrative principal. She had held that position with the Langdon School.

Father-Son Get-Together At Rotary Club

CHIPS OFF THE OL' BLOCK—"Junior" joined dad at lunch yesterday. Rotary Club members feted their sons at the annual father-son luncheon in the Willard Hotel. Top—James King, 11, of 4219 Canal road northwest, a member of the Georgetown Boys' Club whose members were also guests, was a proud lad when Rotary President L. Bert Nye gave him a football. Lower—Three generations in attendance were (left to right) Eugene C. Gott 3d, Eugene C. Gott, jr., and Eugene C. Gott, sr.

Washington Rotarians, their sons and their sons-for-a-day "had themselves a time" yesterday at the club's annual father-son luncheon.

Those members who have no boys of their own were pro tem papas to 40 youngsters from the Georgetown Boys Club who left the Willard Hotel party loaded down with footballs, cameras, pocket knives and other gifts, as well as movie passes and free root beer coupons.

Guest of honor was Luben Boshkoff, a genial 300-pounder who founded the Rotary movement in his native Bulgaria and who is in this country on private business.

The boys and their dads clapped long and loud when Boshkoff presented the Bulgarian colors to L. Bert Nye, club president, who in turn gave the foreign visitor a small American flag.

"Like a new Christopher Columbus, I'm looking for a new way to go home," said Bushkoff, amid hearty laughter, after explaining that because of the war he had been forced to travel 17,500 miles to get here from Sofia, via Russia, Siberia and Japan.

He said Bulgarian Rotarians are enthusiastic, though few in number (210), and inserted a political note in his short talk by expressing the hope his country will soon regain the Aegean Sea outlet which she held before the first World War.

Charles P. Garvin delivered a humorous address and there was more entertainment by Marshall Montgomery, ventriloquist.

King's Stand May Kill Reorganizing

Demands for Public Hearing on Kennedy Bill Dooms It For This Session

By James D. Secrest

Hope of District officials that the Senate would approve the Kennedy reorganization bill before adjournment faded yesterday as Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, criticized it and declared his intention of holding it up for public hearings.

Senator King admitted that there is no chance of completing consideration of it before Congress quits if present plans for adjournment late this month are carried out.

Declaring that the importance of the bill has been exaggerated, Senator King expressed the opinion that if it were enacted into law it would not effect any economies and probably would increase the cost of operating the municipal government.

Won't Sponsor It

"I am unwilling to take the responsibility for sponsoring it without public hearings," he said following a conference with District officials. "It is too important."

A meeting of the Senate District Committee will be called early next week, King said, at which time it will be decided whether to proceed with consideration of the measure this session.

The retiring "mayor" was in conference with two commissioners and members of their "kitchen cabinet" for almost an hour. Afterward Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., stated that the District heads had not altered their position.

"We submitted the bill and stand on that record," he said.

Never Claimed Savings

A few minutes later, after a whispered conversation with his advisers, he added:

"But we have never claimed that the bill would save any money."

During the conference, it is understood, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan spoke against the measure and recommended that the job of administrative assistant to the Commissioners be stricken from the bill. Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal indorsed the legislation and urged that the administrative job be retained.

Senator King, in a press interview following the conference, admitted that he had frequently in the past recommended enlargement of the powers of the Commissioners and a separate District civil service system.

"These could be taken care of in simple legislation," he said.

No Controversy, Is Claim

He added that the "people of the District" had opposed his suggestion that the Commissioners' authority be increased. Members of the Board of Trade, he said, had told him that they preferred to leave the powers in the hands of Congress.

District officials later recalled that extensive hearings have been held on the reorganization bill during the last two years, and said they knew of no public demand for further hearings. Controversial provisions of the original bill have been eliminated, they said.

The Kennedy subcommittee of the House District Committee held hearings on the original Griffenhagen plan last year, and on the modified Kennedy-Seal bill this year. The Commissioners conducted hearings between these two Congressional inquiries at the District Building.

Rhode Island Citizens Urge Stricter Curb On Retail Liquor Sales and Advertising

Would Forbid Home Delivery on Telephone Orders

Tightening of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board regulations to restrict selling and advertising methods of retail liquor dealers was urged last night at the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

Among the recommendations voiced by John A. Fowler, first vice president of that unit, was one forbidding the sale of liquor on telephone orders.

This provision was urged as a method of "properly regulating" the industry by curbing indiscriminate home sales. A person at present is able to order liquor from his home although intoxicated.

Other features of a five-point program included provisos forbidding sale of alcoholic beverages in the same department of grocery stores in which food products were sold; sale of liquor by dispensing of liquor by minors; barring radio advertising of alcoholic beverages between the hours of 6 a. m. and 9 p. m.

Considerable dissension centered around a proposal to forbid liquor retailers from quoting prices in newspaper advertising. Sponsors of the recommendation declared it would serve as a deterrent to overindulgence while opponents declared it would tend to place control of the retail trade here in the hands of a monopoly.

Capt. Oscar Letterman, new commander of Twelfth Precinct, discussed the newly enacted provision of the Traffic and Motor Vehicles Regulations which bars interstate truckers from using Rhode Island avenue northeast.

Congress Heights

Extension of the Congress Heights bus line for 1¼ miles beyond its present terminus at Alabama avenue southeast, was demanded yesterday by Louis Gelbman, president of Congress Heights Citizens Association, at a public hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Gelbman said hundreds of residents in this area are "not properly" served at present. The commission will make a survey on the need for the extension and the number of persons affected. Transit company officials said three buses would have to be added.

Missing Will Of Mrs. Lima Found in Brazil

Fortune in Securities Believed in Danger In London Bank Vault

The missing will of Mrs. Flora de Oliveria Lima, whose fortune in securities is believed exposed to destruction in a London bank vault, was found yesterday in the archives of the Brazilian department of justice in Rio de Janeiro.

The contents of the will will remain a secret until the Brazilian government receives an official certificate of Mrs. Lima's death in Washington on August 10.

Dr. Constantin McGuire, economist, who was named by Mrs. Lima as an executor of her estate, notified her attorney here, Vincent L. Toomey, that the will had been located.

Mrs. Lima was 73 years old at her death. She had lived at 1523 Park road northwest. Her husband was Manoel de Oliveria Lima, Brazilian diplomat, who died in 1928 after having lectured on international law at Catholic University for four years.

To the university, Dr. Lima and his wife gave their 40,000-volume library of works of Brazilian, Portuguese and Spanish history and literature. Mrs. Lima for 12 years had supervised classification of the collection.

Toomey advised the District Court that he believed Mrs. Lima left her estate, which he said was perhaps more than $100,000, to the university to maintain a curator for the Lima library. He urged that the court, as a temporary measure, pending formal probate of the will, use the Atlantic clipper to bring Mrs. Lima's fortune from the vaults of the Bank of London and South America to Washington, where they would be in on danger from German bombs or invasion.

The chief clerk of the metropolitan police has had custody of Mrs. Lima's home here since her death, keeping a guard over the house, as her only surviving near relative is a brother, Arthur Cavalcanti, Rio de Janeiro.

Facilities Asked For District Guard Airmen

Bill Given House Seeks $750,000 For Equipment

Facilities for training the newly formed 121st Observation Squadron of the District National Guard would be furnished by the Federal Government under terms of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa.

The measure authorizes an appropriation of $750,000 for furnishing whatever equipment is necessary at the Washington National Airport, now nearing completion.

Representative Harrington said he did not know just what facilities would be needed but felt that the District National Guard should have the same opportunity for training that the units in the States now have.

The squadron of fliers in the District National Guard has been organized from volunteers. It has a maximum of 30 pilots, but all vacancies had not been filled at the last official report.

The Washington fliers are scheduled to spend 7½ months in training at Lakeland, Fla., beginning this month.

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard, was appointed executive of the local selective service board subject to the passage of the conscription bill before Congress.

The tentative selective service plan for the District was not formally approved but the Commissioners will do so as soon as the final form of the bill is approved by Congress.

Jobless Benefit Fund Shows Rise

D. C. Compensation Surplus May Reach $20,000,000 in Oct., Declares Official

Despite larger benefits to unemployed and decreased levies on pay rolls, surplus funds of the District Unemployment Compensation Board are continuing to increase, it was disclosed yesterday by John A. Marshall, director.

At the same time he denounced headquarters for the $20,000,000 agency, as a "fire trap."

At the close of the last month, the board had on hand $19,642,000. After the next quarterly payment is made in October, the surplus will exceed $20,000,000, Marshall estimated.

Begining July 1, the maximum payment was increased from $15 to $18 and the maximum duration of payments from 16 to 19 weeks. The employer tax was decreased from 3 to 2.7 per cent, retroactive to January 1, 1940.

Marshall attempted to push through his own plan to decrease the surplus, but was not successful.

He recommended a formula which would provide an employer tax as low as one-half of 1 per cent, this percentage depending on the amount of benefit payments made in any one year. For example, if the benefit payments were a small portion of the total amount of money received from employers in any one year, the tax would be reduced accordingly.

Marshall asked the security board several months ago to include a $500,000 item in its next budget to provide a new building for the DUCB and the Employment Service, an agency of the SSB. This request was denied yesterday by the SSB.

It is understood that negotiations have been made by the unemployment compensation board to obtain for its quarters the Ford Building, John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

The greater portion of the staff is located in the "firetrap," which Marshall said has no elevator service.

D. C. Mail Carrier Held in Fight With Policeman

Lawrence E. Taylor, colored, 28, a District mail carrier, was convicted of four charges and demanded a jury trial in a fifth yesterday when he was arraigned in Police Court as an aftermath of a fracas last week with Traffic Policeman Larry A. Hartnett.

Judge Walter J. Casey delivered a stern reprimand to the defendant before sentencing him to pay fines totaling $100 or spend 120 days in jail for speeding, failure to exhibit a registration card or driving permit and hacking without license. On the fifth charge, assault on an officer, Taylor demanded a jury trial.

Hartnett testified that he started pacing Taylor at Michigan avenue and Frankline street northeast, and followed him to an alley in the rear of the 3100 block Eleventh street northwest. When he asked for the driver's permit and registration card, Taylor refused to show them. He had no license to drive the taxicab, Hartnett stated. An argument started, the policeman said, during which he was kicked in the abdomen. His injury confined him to Garfield Hospital overnight.

1890 Idyl of Country School Teacher, Farmer Retold at Haycrafts' Golden Anniversary

5 Sons Present Couple With Gift Of Two Trips

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING PICTURE—Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Haycraft celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a dinner at the Iron Gate Inn

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Grant Haycraft, who eloped 50 years ago, have received two trips as golden anniversary gifts from their children.

The Haycrafts, who live at 7 East Washington street, Kensington, Md., were honored with a dinner Tuesday night at the Iron Gate Inn by five sons and nine grandchildren. The family partnership extends even into business—for Mr. and Mrs. Haycraft form the real estate firm of I. G. & D. S. Haycraft, The "D. S." stands for Daisy Sylvester, Mrs. Haycraft's name before her marriage in Mankato, Minn., September 10, 1890.

The five sons joined in presenting their parents with two trips—one to Bath, Me., ancestral home of Mrs. Hayecraft, this month, and the other to Elizabethtown, Ky., ancestral home of Mr. Haycraft, in October. Two of the sons, Everett and Charles Haycraft, both of Washington, expect to accompany them.

A 19-year-old granddaughter, Doris Haycraft, read an account of the Haycraft romance at the dinner. She told how the young school teacher was out walking with her class in 1889 on a country road in Minnesota when a young farmer came along in his wagon and offered a ride to the entire group. The children scrambled aboard and precipitated the introduction.

Four sons, who live in and around Washington, were present at the dinner with their families. They are Everett F. Haycraft, an attorney in the Federal Trade Commission; Charles Haycraft, insurance man; Jolly Haycraft, employed in the Department of Agriculture, and Glenn Haycraft, who is with the Home Owners Loan Corporation. Present also was another son, Kenneth, who was a football star at the University of Minnesota, and who is now an attorney in the Chicago office of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Judge Completes Vagrant's Story

Twenty-two men arrested in a crusade against District park sleepers were found guilty of vagrancy yesterday in Police Court, and ordered to post bonds or spend 60 to 90 days in jail.

Yesterday's convictions raised to 88 the number of floaters and panhandlers sent to jail through the efforts of Park Policemen Bernard J. Beckman and A. J. Bickford.

One of the defendants yesterday told Judge George D. Neilson that he had enlisted in the Army. When the story was found to be untrue, the yarn spinner was given the secured sentence, six months in jail.

Tigers Regain Lead as Yankees-Indians Split

Cleveland's Feller Bows To Rookie

Bonham Wins First, 3-1; Tribe Takes 6-Inning Nightcap, 5-3; Half Game Out

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 11.—Cleveland's Indians, reeling ingloriously toward a double defeat with their pitching ace, Bob Feller, licked in the first game, roused themselves late this afternoon and wrested a 5-3 victory from the Yankees to gain a stand-off in a hectic doubleheader.

It was an exchange of indignities toward the pitching stars of the two clubs. After Feller had taken a 3-1 beating to the dismay of the 33,471 Cleveland fans, the Indians blasted Yankee ace Red Ruffing out of the box in the second game, which darkness halted at the end of five and one-half innings.

Their even break, coincident with a Detroit triumph over Boston, bounced the Indians out of their league lead, but they salvaged second place with their stirring second game assault on Ruffing.

The big Yankee pitcher was holding a 2-0 lead in the second game when the Indians suddenly bestirred themselves to the accompaniment of a wild uproar in the stands. Coincidentally, the Yankees cracked, and the Indians jammed five runs across the plate in the inning. Grievous errors by Babe Dahlgren and Ruffing, himself, figured in the five Cleveland runs, four of them unearned.

Bonham Wins Fifth Straight

Thus did the Yankee muff the first chance they have had all season to take over the league lead.

In the first game they produced a pitcher who could outperform Boo Feller at least on this important afternoon. They found him in their sensational rookie, Ernie Bonham, who won his fifth straight victory. Bonham and Feller each allowed five hits, but not an Indian reached base against Bonham as he pitched hitless ball in the last six innings. Bonham's fork-ball pitch baffled 'em.

Joe DiMaggio was Feller's poison in the first game. He figured in two of the three Yankee runs.

Ancient Al Smith was the winning pitcher in the second game, although he barely weathered a first-inning attack that netted the Yankees two runs. A walk to Gordon, a single by Selkirk and DiMaggio's double to center scored the runs, and Smith filled the bases thereafter with walks, only to escape further damage when Dahlgren hit into a double play.

One was out when Dahlgren muffed a throw from Crosetti on Chapman's grounder in the fourth to set the Cleveland uprising in motion. Weatherly followed with a double to left that scored Chapman, and Jeff Heath tied the score with a single to center. Ruffing then messed the works for the Yankees.

The big pitcher, ordinarily a superb fielder, threw a grounder off Boudreau's bat into center field attempting at force play, and it was a two-base misplay. Beau Bell came along with a left-field double that scored the third and fourth runs of the inning, and Keltner drove Ruffing out of the box with a run-laden single to center.

Tigers Beat Bosox, Vault Back Into Lead

18-Hit Attack Wins, 11-7, Puts Detroit Half Game Ahead of Indians

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 11.—The Detroit Tigers leveled an 18-hit attack to overcome some wobbly pitching today as they defeated the Boston Red Sox, 11 to 7, and vaulted back into first place in the wildest American League pennant race in years.

Coupled with the split at Cleveland between the Indians and the New York Yankees, the victory left the Tigers a half-game and 4 percentage points up on the Tribesmen and a full game and 7 percentage points on the champion Yankees, who open a three-game series here tomorrow.

The Tiger blows included Hank Greenberg's thirty-first homer of the season with Barney McCosky on base in the fourth inning. Bobby Doerr, of the Sox, smashed his twenty-first circuit blow in the fifth with Manager Joe Cronin on the sacks.

Detroit used three pitchers and Boston five in the free-hitting, see-saw struggle.

Fred Hutchinson, the $70,000 rookie of 1939, who has never pitched consistently for Detroit, started for the Tigers, but gave up in the third after allowing five hits in two frames. Johnny Gorsica followed and lasted until a Boston rally in the seventh. Archie McKain came in to finish and get credit for his fifth straight relief victory.

Dean Defeats Dodgers, 3-2, In Comeback

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 11.—Dizzy Dean, a smarter but slower man, returned to the National League today and whipped the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers, 3 to 2, on six hits after the Chicago Cubs had captured the opener, 8 to 5.

Dean, who voluntarily went to Tulsa of the Texas League last June in an effort to recover from his arm trouble, rejoined the Cubs on Sunday, and this was his first start.

Occasionally he tried a "fast" one, a shadow of the blazing ball he used to throw, and most of the time he got away with it. Pete Reiser hit one out of the park in the seventh.

He relied almost exclusively on a sidearm motion that baffled the Brooklyns and showed good control except for a temporary lapse in the sixth, when he issued two of his four walks.

Greiner Beats Pair Of Amateur Favorites

Baltimorean Beats Doering, Hoerner; Paces Ward; Earle Skinker and Ralph Bogart Bow Out of National Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Otto Greiner, the belting Baltimorean whose golf game is improving with age, tossed a double-barreled surprise into the first two rounds of the National Amateur Championship here today at Winged Foot by beating (1) trans-Mississippi champion, Art Doering, and (2) Jack Hoerner, a ranking Chicago shot maker.

The 21-year-old University of Baltimore student, who has won several of his sectional titles in Washington, went through the two toughest opponents of the day to pace four former champions, Bud Ward, Johnny Fischer, Jess Sweetser, Willie Turnesa and other favorites into the round of 16.

Greiner, medalist in the Middle Atlantic sectional qualifying rounds at Chevy Chase, was the only survivor of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia contingent, but the Old Dominion State champion, Samuel Bates, jr., of Virginia Beach, took former Finalist Pat Abbott to the nineteenth hole before losing in the second round.

District Pair Lose Out

The District's 19 and 20-year-old match play qualifiers, Earle Skinker and Ralph Bogart, were each 3 and 2 morning round victims, Skinker bowing before Metropolitan Champion Johnny Burke, who graduated from Georgetown in June, and Bogart to the 6-foot-5 Massachusetts

Tribe Fans Throw Barrage of Fruit At Yankee Coach

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Art Fletcher, biting-tongued Yankee coach, was the target of a fruit barrage at the Cleveland-New York doubleheader today.

A variety of ammunition, composed mainly of lemons with a few juicy tomatoes and a banana or two, was tossed at Fletcher from the stands. A couple of times the third-base coaching box—which Fletcher occupied—looked like a vegetable cart after a windstorm.

The barrage brought Manager Joe McCarthy from the dugout to talk to the umpires about it, but they did nothing. A few pieces of fruit also were aimed at Charlie Keller in leftfield and Coach Earl Combs at first, but the fans' accuracy was poor.

Bill Delancey Becomes Coach For Cardinals

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 11.—Bill Delancey, reserve Cardinal catcher, has been made a coach for the remainder of the season in order to make room for Rookie Outfielder Carden Gillenwater whom the Cards purchased from their New Orleans farm, it was announced today.

A star during the Cardinals' pennant and World Series victories in 1934, Delancey's health broke during the 1935 season. He went to Arizona, his baseball days apparently at an end.

But as his health gradually improved the Cardinals made him manager of the Albuquerque, N Mex. club. Then he came back in a Cardinal uniform this season. He played in several games.

Betty Jameson Wins 2d Round Match in Golf

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Sept. 11.—Brown-haired Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., national women's champion, was forced to the nineteenth hole today to capture her second-round match in the women's Western Amateur golf tournament.

Miss Jameson, tourney comedalist, was playing slender Ellamae Williams, Chicago city and Illinois State champion and the daughter of a Chicago professional. Miss Williams drove out of bounds and required seven strokes on the overtime hole, while Betty had a par 5.

The other comedalist, Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., twice a winner of the tournament, had little trouble winning from Mrs. Frank Currie, Seattle, 6 and 4, although both were well over par.

Continuing her blistering pace, diminutive Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., racked up another one-sided victory, showing the day's best golf in defeating Mrs. Helen H. Bertagnole, of Salt Lake City, 6 and 5.

Tomorrow Miss Hicks plays Miss Miley, who defeated her on the twentieth hole in a Florida tournament last winter. Miss Jameson meets the heavy-hitting Nancy Hurst, of Portland, Oreg., who eliminated the women's Western junior champion, Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak., 4 and 2.

Yanks Purchase Nine Players

New York, Sept. 11 (INS).—Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, today announced the purchase of five players from Newark and four from Kansas City.

Among the nine are the long-heralded pair from Kansas City, Shortstop Phil Rizzuto and Second Baseman Jerry Priddy. Johnny Lindell and Don Hendrickson, right-hand pitchers, also were bought from the Blues.

The five obtained from Newark are Outfielder Tommy Holmes and Pitchers George Barley, Steve Peek, Norman Branch and Allen Gettel.

Heavy Program Worked Out for Redskins Today

The Redskins are going to be busy people today, if a program demanding appearances in three different places means anything. The Junior Board of Commerce will hail the 'Skins at its Thursday luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel, with Coach Ray Flaherty, Owner George Marshall, Capt. Turk Edwards and Sammy Baugh in attendance.

The entire squad tonight will sit in the President's box at the Capitol Theater at 8:30 o'clock for Art Brown's sing session. A few moments later, Erny Pinckert, Charley Malone, Jim Barber, Dick Todd and Frank Filchock will take on a group of local bowling stars at the King Pin Bowling Alleys, 1309 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

THE YANKEE-CLEVELAND DOUBLE-HEADER.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—1:15 p. m.—It's 15 minutes before game time and the strangest thing is happening in the Cleveland dressing room. The Indians are holding a meeting, with Manager Oscar Vitt, of all people, among those present.

POVICH

1:20—The common people are either suddenly prosperous or have given up on the Indians. There are only 150 fans in the centerfield bleachers. There are 40,000 empty grandstand seats which would be a box office calamity in any other park, but in the big Cleveland stadium it means 25,000 seats are filled.

1:30—The Indians are taking the field. If they win a double-header today and win the pennant, it will be without the permission of the copyright owners, the Yankees.

1:35—It didn't take Bob Feller long. He just struck out two Yankees—Rolfe and Selkirk—in the first inning. The strike-out pitches were curve balls and Feller is apparently a guy who can't be trusted.

1:55—There's a commotion around third base. Fans in the upper deck are showering Third Base Coach Ari Fletcher of the Yankees with lemons, and the ground crew is clearing the littered field. Incidentally, this isn't the first season Cleveland has tried to win the pennant with lemons.

2:00—Feller is getting no worse than a draw at this point. Boudreau just tripled to right to tie the score at 1-1. Better give Selkirk an assist on that triple. He was off at the crack of the bat, all right—but in the wrong direction.

2:20—Stadium officials just announced that the official crowd estimate is 33,471, showing that a lot of people still have (1) a buck-ten and (2) faith in the Indians.

2:42—Selkirk just hit into a sixth-inning double play and that was one time the Indians certainly got together on something. Every man in the Cleveland infield had a hand in the twin killing which went from Keltner to Bell to Mack to Boudreau.

2:45—That guy DiMaggio just belted a single through the box and the Yanks are now leading, 2-1. It is supposed to be a perfect day for Feller's fast ball, but he forgot to get a written guarantee.

3:20—Long before this we should have mentioned that a guy named Ernie Bonham, who has already won four in a row, is out there doing a job on the Indians. They haven't had a man on base for four innings, and with the Yanks leading, 2-1, the Indians are beginning to run out of innings.

4:20—Mickey Rooney is visiting both dugouts between games. It's quite an act and the Cleveland players are probably ready to vote him an Oscar—Vitt.

5:05—Hold everything. The Indians are getting obstreperous. They just scored five runs, knocked Ruffing out of the box, and are leading the Yanks 5 to 2 at the end of the third. Now Ruffing and the Yankees know how Custer felt about it.

5:15—Keller is on base in the fourth, none are out, Dahlgren is going to bat, and so are the rain clouds. They're stopping the game and putting the tarpu, tarpal, tarpau—the cover on the field.

5:51—Powell is about as popular with the Yankees as sixth place. He just struck out, and is looking around for a nice, empty bomb crater to crawl into.

5:59—That Yankee threat amounted to only one run, and it's still 5-3, Indians, who are now hoping that for at least another inning daylight will hold out.

Chisox Collect 16 Hits, Beat Nats, 7-4

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Sept. 11.—After taking five straight whippings this season from Dutch Leonard, the White Sox today got a heap of revenge by blasting the able Washington knuckle baller for 16 hits, the assortment being good for a 7-to-4 Chicago victory. The slugging festival was led by former Senator Joe Kuhel, who had a triple, two singles and his twenty-third homer in four times at bat, and with nary a smack wasted.

The success enabled the Sox to take the season series from the Washington gentlemen, 12 victories to 10. It also gave Johnny Rigney his fourteenth favorable decision of the year, though Washington got to him for 11 hits, including a homer (his fifth) and two singles by George Case.

Leonard, who heretofore had got tougher and tougher as each of his games with the Sox progressed, got softer and softer in the late innings today. A two-run homer by George Case in the fifth had wiped out a 2 to 1 Chicago lead and this seemed an omnious development in the light of past events. But the Sox made two runs in the sixth to break the tie and in the seventh added their margin of victory on three runs produced by a homer and five singles.

The Senators indulged themselves in a mild orgy in the ninth, good for a pair of runs, but Rigney, though wabbly, had no trouble hanging on to the finish.

The Sox surprised themselves and everybody else by making a run off Leonard in the first inning. Skeeter Webb and Mike Tresh started the Sox offensive by the kind of attack the Sox previously this season had made on the occasions when they were confronted by Leonard. They flied out. Then Kuhel launched his demonstration that Dutch isn't a superman, earlier Sox theories to the contrary. Joe banged the first of his four smacks, a triple to right, and scored on Solters' single to left.

George Case Homers

The Sox started as though bent on a basketful in the fourth, with Kuhel again the bell-wether. Joe opened with a single and Solters also singled. Luke Appling singled to right, scoring Kuhel. One of Leonard's pitches bounced several feet out of Rick Ferrell's glove and Moose Solters fancied he could get to third. He was wrong. Ferrell easily tossed him out. Taft Wright walked, but Mike Kreevich hit into a double play.

The Leonard menace seemed back on the Box in the fifth after a single by Ferrell and Case's fifth homer of the season tied the score at 2 to 2. Gee Walker singled in the fifth, but ended the session when he was plucked off first.

The Chicago fellows went ahead again in the sixth, Kuhel for the third time touching off the enterprise with a hit, this one a single. Solters forced Kuhel and Appling walked after which Wright singled

Halfback Boyd Morgan Becomes Latest Redskin Casualty

Two Players Will Be Cut By Flaherty

Coach Flaherty Expected Today To Announce Final Slice of Roster

Boyd (Red) Morgan, halfback veteran of a year, was the latest member of the Redskin cripples last night after the team stepped from a train at Union Station and promptly adjourned to Anacostia Park to start work for the opening of their National League campaign Sunday against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Morgan, who came up with some valuable blocking in the Redskins' 35-12 rout of the Eastern College All-Stars Tuesday night in Boston, pulled a muscle in his leg.

He may be out two or three days or maybe longer, Coach Ray Flaherty admitted yesterday, with characteristic indifference to the definite.

Morgan joined a company suffering from minor ailments of one sort or another, which includes Max Krause, still suffering from a back injury; Ed Justice, limping with a foot bruised in a Boston drill, and Jay Turner, also slowed up by a back injury.

With only three days left before the all-important date with Jock Sutherland's Dodgers, Flaherty today is expected to announce the final cut in his Redskin register.

Frankly fearing a setback at the opening of the season despite the Redskins' good showing against the All-Stars, Flaherty went to work with renewed vigor yesterday to polish up the Skins' pass defense work—a department in which the team has been none too good.

In addition to offering a liberal collection of veterans, the Dodgers this year have six of the Eastern college all-stars who were on the eleven that beat the New York Giants, 16-7. Four of the rookies were all-America backs in college, and two were on Dr. Sutherland's team at Pitt—Kish and Casiano. The Dodger invasion will unveil Brooklyn's two prize all-America backs in 1939, Banks MacFadden, from Clemson, and George (Bad News) Cafego, from Tennessee.

Police Club 5 Claims Insect Baseball Title

Boys Club Nine Blanks Ida's, 3-0; Pohutsky Is Victor

No. 5 Police Boys' Club diamond team claimed the insect division championship of the city yesterday following its second shutout of Ida's Department nine in two days, 3-0. Tuesday the Police youngsters took a 2-0 decision.

Lodge Pohutsky, No. 5 hurler, checked in one of his finest performances of the year to get credit for the game. He allowed only six well scattered hits. Wiensburg, of Ida's, issued seven safeties to the winners.

Two runs in the first inning sent No. 5 away winging and there was never any doubt of the outcome. Another score was registered in the sixth for insurance.

It was the Police nine's twenty-fourth triumph this season against only two defeats.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 11.—Two of the country's most enthusiastic knitters and crocheters will do their darndest to "drop" two tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden. The famed exponents of the needle art will attempt also to put the needle to their opponents, and presumably will bring along their loudest Brooklyn rooters to "purl" for them.

CONSIDINE

The disciples of fancy stitching are Steve Belloise and Paul Debello. The two toughs learned to knit and crochet as kids, and separately became incurable disciples of the art. Indirectly, they can trace their ring careers to it, for they had to learn how to fight to defend their right to knit those socks and jab out those doilies.

Belloise, who looks like the next middleweight champion, fights the former champ of the division, Ceferino Garcia. Debello, a rugged preliminary boy who is working on the dandiest bedspread you girls ever saw, fight Dave Castilloux. Both fights promise to be raw primordial brawls.

Belloise is as savage a maverick as you ever saw. When he's hurt or he knows the other guy is, he is a torrid tornado of action. The sound of his hard fists beating on the skulls of opponents—this past year—has become an anvil chorus accompaniment to the ring game.

He has had only 31 fights, and has 24 straight wins to his credit, but they are matching him against a man who, dumb as he is, has much more ring savvy. They probably know what they are doing, and a victory for Belloise will put him right up there for a match against Ken Overlin, who is the world's middleweight champion of New York. He has a strange style: stands with his ape arms well out in front of him and gets blazing leverage with little or no swing. His hands are big and hard, as are Debello's.

Belloise has knocked out 15 of his opponents and the boys are hailing him as one of the new wonder-gorillas of the game. But he hasn't gone back on his first love. He is turning out socks, table spreads, hot plate pads and wristlets with an industry that would wring a squeak of envy from Helen Hokinson's Madam Chairwoman. Steve takes his knitting to the aromatic Pioneer Gym with him, and his needles clack and whirr busily while he is waiting to maul some sparring mate. Debello is a little upset over Belloise's needlework and has challenged him to a red-blooded doily contest but, to date, Belloise hasn't accepted.

Neither objects to posing with poised needle. Nobody, it is needless to add, kids them any more about their gentle and ladylike hobby. P. S.: Both needleworkers to win.

Darndest collapse in golf since Sam Snead took that eight on the eighteenth hole at Philadelphia to deprive himself of the Open title was the swoon turned in the other day at Winged Foot by Johnny Cree, of Hamburg, N. Y., son of the old Yankee outfielder. Cree shot a 71, or one under par, over the difficult course on the opening day of the amateur. He led the pack until late in the afternoon when Maurice McCarthy, of Cincinnati game in with a 70. Then, the next day, Cree went out and carved himself right out of the tournament with an 87. On one par-4 hole he wound up in a rockpile, two traps and out of bounds, for a nine.

Bing Crosby, by the way, saved his best golf for last. He toured the final nine holes at Winged Foot in 37, or one over par. On more than one hole his shots wrung spontaneous yells from the gallery—and they weren't cheering a movie star, they were cheering good golf shots. But he had damaged himself with a sour 83 the day before, and he missed qualifying by five shots. His only alibi, when Ted Husing asked him what the trouble was, was "I guess I took too many shots."

Incidentally, Hollywood will send a couple of its better-known figures, and I don't mean to be personal, to the national women's championship. Ruby Keeler and Mrs. Rod La Roque, who was Vilma Banky, will try for the title.

PST—Don MeNeill, the Okie who came East instead of going West, and did pretty good, will go to South America on the honeymoon of Sarah Fabyan and Elwood Cooke . . . Does Oscar Vitt's contract cover 1941, too? . . . Jock Sutherland secretly helped Tuss McLaughry coach that beautifully fashioned all-star team that beat the Giants last week . . . The great Coast router, Malicious, won't come East for Al Vanderbilt's $50,000 marathon gallop at Belmont . . . The U. S. G. A. made $10,000 on its amateur program, which is a work of art by the buy . . . I think that fellow Sam Butler, the sports-news broadcaster is terrific . . . Only difference between the contracts of Czar Landis and Czar Storck is that Storck hasn't the right to dissolve clubs without civil recourse and Storck may be fired if he comes down with dementia praecox.

Zaharias Boys to Combine in Team Match at Arena

The Zaharias boys—Chris and Babe—will unfold their skill as a two-man team on tonight's wrestling card at Turner's Arena, meeting Sheriff Tom Hanley and Herbie Freeman, a 600-pound duo.

Headline honors, however, will be turned over to Lou Plummer, the Baltimore villain, and Warren Bockwinkle, the flashy St. Louis grappler, who will clash in a finish match.

This will be the sixth straight week for two-man competition, but will mark the debut of the Zaharias boys, Plummer and his partner, Ed Newman, have won four out of five two-man bouts, but tonight Plummer is grappling alone.

Durity-Harper Loft Wins Pigeon Race

Two entries from the Durity-Harper loft ran off with first and second places with an average speed of 52 miles per hour in the second race of the current young bird series sponsored by the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club.

The birds, flying over an airline course of 110 miles from Cumberland, Md., to Washington, were aided by favorable northwest winds. The winning birds covered the distance in 2 hours 7 minutes to beat out a field of 160 young birds from 16 local lofts.

The result of the race, giving the average speed in yards per minute of the first returns: Durity-Harper, 1,527; Durity-Harper, 1,526; J. B. Lyons, 1,524; W. A. Coryell, 1,516; Burgess-Carroll, 1,513; Tillett-Corder, 1,505; Morris Brothers, 1,503; Ollie Brown, 1,496; Hilltop Loft, 1,494; Edward Barrett, 1,488; C. W. Morgan, 1,487; W. R. Pennington, 1,475; F. Track Trot Mark Set by Greyhound

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 11 (AP).—Greyhound, king of American trotters, added another record to his long string today when he twice circled the Kentucky State Fair's half-mile track in 2:00½; a new track mark.

The 8-year-old "gray ghost," driven by Sep Palin, was given an ovation by a large crowd after the time was announced.

The former record of 2:02¼ was set by Morley Frisco. Today's time, it was announced, is the second best trotting mile effort on a half-mile track. The record is 1:58¾, registered by Greyhound at Goshen, N. Y., three years ago.

Eddie Mead to Seek Reduction In Rounds of Furr Battle Here

Caught between the frying pan and the fire, Fat Eddie Mead, manager of Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, will come to town Monday to seek a reduction in the forthcoming Armstrong-Phil Furr title bout here from 15 to 12 rounds.

Promoter Mike Jacobs is shouting about injunctions and the New York Athletic Commission is threatening to suspend Mead if he goes through with the 15-round title fight in Griffith Stadium September 23.

On the other hand, the District Boxing Commission is threatening suspension if Meade fails to live up to the agreement, which Commissioners Claude Owen and Thomas P. Morgan, jr., said calls for 15 rounds with the title at stake.

Mead will risk suspension by the National Boxing Commission in asking that the Washington fight be cut down to 12 rounds.

Such a arrangement would make everything fine in New York, Mead reasons. The New York body would refuse to regard the Armstrong-Furr battle as a title affair, and Mead would protect the $2,500 guarantee he has posted in that State that he will make his next title defense there October 4 against Fritzie Zivic.

Morgan and Owen said there could be no compromise as far as the local boxing commission is concerned. If the fight is staged as a 12-round title bout the local body along with Mead will be suspended by the N. B. A., a state of affairs which calls for a round of aspirin on the house.

THE National Amateur

LOOKS TO O. B. KEELER

The Biographer of Golf and American Golf Champions. For 27 years has followed all the great matches. Knows all the top flight golfers of today and yesterday.

(By special wire to Post)

PRESS TENT, WINGED FOOT GOLF CLUB, MAMARONECK, N. Y., SEPT. 11.—As these lines are written 16 gallant survivors of the first two rounds of the National Amateur Championship are going into "sudden deaths" or 18-hole bouts on Thursday. And I think I know who is going to come out on top.

In the roster are Marvin "Bud" Ward, defending champion; a couple of former champs, Willie Turnesa, 1938; Johnny Fischer, 1936, and Ray Billows, runner-up in 1937 and 1939; Patrick Abbott, runner-up in 1938; and the medalist in the present competition, Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, with a score of 140, one over the record.

A cluster of other competitors can give any golfer a walloping when the finger is on them. Today the finger was Ray Billows in round 1, when he holed a 6-footer to square his match—and traveled 5 extra holes to win with a birdie on the twenty-third in the day's long match.

Bud Ward was playing 3 under par all day, winning two matches, the second from Freddie Haas, who had touched off five 3's in the second 9 of his morning match to get a whack at the champ.

Dick Chapman, the medalist; Willie Turnesa, and Wilford Wehrle all won into the third round handily, while Strafaci had to win the last 3 holes and then an extra one, for his matinee victory.

Probably no first round in the book has equaled this one for close, hard-fought and overtime matches. Nine of the morning bouts reached the home greens and 3 went to extra holes—two going to the twentieth, and one, the Billows affair, going to the twenty-third. Abbott and Strafaci both were involved in extra hole combats.

MARVIN WARD—Defending champion and Leading amateur in the U.S. Open of '39. A pair of 5s on the last par 3 holes kept Bud from repeating the "double win" feat of Chick Evans and Bobby Jones.

WILLIE TURNESA, Amateur Champion of 1938. Playing best game of his career this season. Has the further advantage of being acquainted with practically every blade of grass at Winged Foot.

JOHNNY FISCHER, the tall and studious Kentuckian, won the U.S. Amateur Championship at the difficult Garden City course in 1936. He has played on two Walker Cup Teams.

RAY BILLOWS—the Cinderella Boy of Golf, runner-up to Johnny Goodman in 1937 and to Bud Ward last year at Chicago—comes to Winged Foot a prime favorite—knowing the great course intimately.

DICK CHAPMAN, the Greenwich, Conn., perfectionist. Studies golf more enthusiastically than any other amateur. Has threatened in the National for 3 years—knows Winged Foot like a book.

B. PATRICK ABBOTT, Pasadena Star, won the 1938 Public Links title. Coming East "just for the ride" he went to final round at Pittsburgh in 1938—runner up to Turnesa.

Randle's Queen Captures Feature Purse at Timonium Track

Filly Heads Seneschal For Victory

8,000 Fans See Feature; Winner Pays $28.60 Price for $2

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium, Md., Sept. 11.—Randle's Queen, owned by U. S. Randle, of Washington, D. C., took command early and stayed on top to win the Brookland Wood Farm Handicap in easy fashion today. The 3-year-old daughter of Espino and Glorify coasted to the wire two and a half lengths ahead of Mrs. M. V. Daly's Seneschal and another length and a half in advance of Mrs. J. M. Franklin's Stand Alone.

The crowd of 8,000 did not fancy the Washington-owned filly and she paid a $28.60 mutuel, under a good ride by Jockey Willie Kelly. Her time of 1:21 3-5 was excellent for the 6½ furlongs course.

Red Wrack, carrying 120 pounds, was installed the favorite in the field of eight and was photographed out of third money. The public choice would have been much closer but was knocked back by Seneschal leaving the backstretch on the final time around.

Another Washington-owned horse won the first race. Danny Galotta's Fusionette, a daughter of Caruso, was virtually left at the post, but Vesseli got her under way on the outside and she circled horses to get to the front. Don Barr, owned by Eddie Samaha, overcame early trouble and headed Fusionette. The first-time starter, however, came on to win by a half length and paid $6.80.

Three was a $69.60 pay off in the daily double when Reigh Tetrarch won the second race. This is the horse that many believed won last week when the photo gave it to Wale Signal. The 7-year-old led all the way today and won by a good length. Lady Timarole and Exhort followed the leader to the wire.

Nonnenkamp Sold

Boston, Sept. 11 (AP).—Leo Nonnenkamp, utility outfielder for the Boston Red Sox for three years until his release on option to Newark of the International League last June, was sold outright to that club today.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIVE-O-FOUR, $5.30, $3.90, $3.00; WAHCOO, $6.50, $3.90; CUSTER, $2.90.

FIVE-O-FOUR was steadied while racing on inside early, rallied gamely when placed to drive, drew out into good lead and won with speed in reserve. WAHCOO was hard ridden and had no excuses. CUSTER was forward factor early and tired. NEITA WOOD closed some ground.

EIGHTH RACE—About 1¼ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:39. Off 5:39½. Winner, Mrs. J. L. Furr's b. or br. m. (7), by By-Pass II—Countersign. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNTER PASS, $9.80, $4.80, $4.20; LAST REVUE, $4.70, $3.20; CAFFEINE, $4.20.

COUNTER PASS, going in improved form, was trailer early, came out for racing room and wore down LAST REVUE in closing strides. LAST REVUE raced LAST SCAMP into submission to get to front and barely failed to resist winner. CAFFEINE closed resolutely. NEVER IDOL rallied mildly.

Dear Al.

This is the last go-round of the half mile season. It will be good-by to the little ones and hello to the big ones. Tomorrow will be a day off for the fans but not the writers, who must work on Saturday's entries at Havre de Grace. Good time Timonium, better time the Graw. And right here, I want to inform my fine-feathered friend who sends in those snappy postcards that I had exactly six winners on Tuesday's program. I asked a jockey who has been around the tracks for seven years to buy me a ticket yesterday and discovered that he had never purchased a race ticket from the window himself during his career. Matt Twoomey, the fight trainer, was out and was talking to Alan Clarke, the horse trainer. Matt showed Alan the Chicago papers in which the Midwest scribes said Matt's boy, Mamakos, deserved better than a draw in that Chicago fight last week. Alan showed Matt the breeding of several colts on his farm. "Mamakee was punching at his best," said Matt. "There never was a Mowlee that didn't show speed," said Alan. Blue Joan, the steeplechase horse, was in action for the first time since 1934. She is an 11-year-old. Trainer Tubby Adams held her knitting while she ran. Steward Ty Shea was unable to get to the track yesterday due to a leg injury. Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan didn't do a bad job with the final program. Clymene goes today and then takes a long rest. She has earned it, and she needs it. So do I, for that matter. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Pop's Sister has the speed of this party. Needs only to get off the reserve list. Keer Kahn is improving and that last was a very impressive effort. Should go well with these. Tile Plate has worked well and is a possible surprise.

Second race—Anya has plenty of speed and belongs in this kind of company and has the speed to win it. Must be taken off the also eligible list, however. Scarlet Flame gets in with a feather and is a dangerous contender. Dressmaker for the minor award.

Third race—Quaker Street has had a rest and deserves the call in jumping stock of this sort. Needs only the right ride. King Dominant shot and missed last out and is a dangerous contender. Playdema gets in very light and has a chance.

Fourth race—Miss Pilgrim raced on the outside fence all the way last out and finished second. If she saves some ground she will be right there in this field. Cotillion has a race that points him out. Miss Idle probably needed that last.

Fifth race—Lucky Light has had poor racing luck in that recent test, forced out entering the stretch. Looks like the right spot. Gold D'Or will be cracking and has a good chance. Doctor's Nurse should go well.

Sixth race—Miss Maker continues to have hard luck but I must go back to her. She is the class and may get a break this time. Quick Vine has her speed and should be close. Pirate Ship is better than shown recently.

Seventh race—Chilly Ebbie, winner of her last three, should make it four in this field. Yankee Lad has a bit of class and should like the route. Best Policy for the show end.

Eighthy race—Clymene goes for all the tea today. Perhaps I'm letting sentiment run away with me but I'm forced to string along with the honest mare. Duchess Del and Square Play to complete the money circle.

Best bet—Chilly Ebbie.

Barney Welsh Takes Recreation Net Crown From Smith

D. C. Champ Also Wins in Doubles Play

Pairs With Lynch To Defeat Murphy And Smith in Final

Barney Welsh, District of Columbia champion, dethroned C. Alphonso Smith yesterday in the finals of the seventh annual invitation tennis tourney of the Department of Recreation, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2 and 6—0. He then teamed up with Hugh Lynch to score an upset in the doubles over Smith and Dick Murphy.

It was the second time in a week that Welsh had defeated Smith in a tournament finale. He defeated Smith in the Northern Virginia net finals last week.

The District champion's overhead smashes and cagey net play were too much for Smith, who won the first set and then faded. Welsh tried to cope with Smith from long distance in the first set, but concentrated on his net game to win easily thereafter, losing only four games.

In the doubles it was Welsh's overhead placements versus Murphy's powerful forehand and volleying, but the team of Welsh and Lynch triumphed in straight sets over the top-seeded Smith and Murphy, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2. Dick Tennyson, of the Recreation Department, presented trophies to the winners.

Reds Beat Bees Twice In Farewell

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 11.—With their pitching aces, Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, operating effectively, the Cincinnati Reds said their 1940 farewells to the Boston Bees today by sweeping a double-header, 8-0 and 3-1. It was the nineteenth victory of each of those star boxmen.

Walters opened the twin bill by tossing a four-hitter against the Bees to gain his third shutout of the campaign. The Reds clinched that contest in the fourth inning when they registered five times by belting Manny Salvo for four hits and working him for a pass. Walters drove in two runs during the barrage with a long single.

Derringer limited the Bees to six hits in the nightcap, but the first two of them, a double by Sebby Sisti and Johnny Cooney's single in the first inning, saved the Bees from another whitewashing.

The Reds collected eight hits off Nick Stringevich, bunching them for their three tallies in the fifth and ninth frames. Three miscues were charged against the Bees and one of them was Eddie Miller's first error in 41 games.

Women Gain Finals In Club Golf Play

Mrs. Teal Wins Exciting Match On 19th Hole at Congressional; Mrs. Pray, Mrs. Stokes to Meet

Competition was narrowed down to two players in all but one of the six-club championship tournaments for women, now being staged on nearby golf courses, after a full day of action yesterday.

The lone exception was Washington Golf and Country Club, where an oversized championship flight of 16 started play for the title Tuesday. Following yesterday's quarter-finals Mrs. Wilda Martin, medalist, was still favored to take the crown. Her second victim was Miss Elise Snavely, 6 and 5.

Mrs. J. W. Godfrey and Mrs. C. S. Teal earned a tangle for the crown at Congressional today, following semifinal victories yesterday. Mrs. Godfrey ousted Mrs. R. L. Rose easily, 6 and 4, but Mrs. Teal was considerably more pressed. She came to the last hole in her match with Mrs. E. H. Henderson, 1 down. An 18-foot putt earned her a victory there, and on the nineteenth she ended things with a par.

A bang-up title match is on the card at Manor involving Mrs. L. G. Pray, the defending champion, and Mrs. W. R. Stokes. The first defeated Mrs. J. R. Dailey yesterday, 4 and 3, and Medalist Mrs. Stokes ended Mrs. H. A. Neff's hopes with a 5 and 4 victory.

Columbia's championship will go to either Mrs. J. F. Gross or Mrs. A. C. Minnix. The pair squares off at 9:35 this morning. Yesterday Mrs. Gross was forced to the twentieth hole before defeating Mrs. J. A. Marr, 1 up. At the eighteenth Mrs. Marr squared the match with a 20-foot putt, each carded a 5 on the nineteenth, and on the twentieth Mrs. Gross checked in a par 4 for the nod. Mrs. Minnix tripped Mrs. B. C. Hartig, 2 and 1.

Otto Greiner Ousts Doering, Hoerner From National Golf

Skinker and Burke matched pars and bogeys for the first nine holes as they turned all square but the Columbia Club youngster was in trouble on 10, 11 and 13 and lost the match on those three holes. Bogart had putter trouble, missing a pair of 2-footers and several others in the makeable range. He was 3 down as early as the sixth and cut it to 1 at ten but could not get even.

Bates, who qualified via the play-off route at Chevy Chase, was good in the pinches as he defeated John Wood, of Cincinnati, 2 and 1, in the morning. He played Abbott even though 15 holes of the second round. He was 1 up and two to play, lost the seventeenth when the Pasadena shotmaker, former National Publinks champion, blasted within 6 inches of the cup for a par. Bates played a courageous 4 and a halve on the eighteenth but he drove just off the fairway on the first extra hole, and those 2 inches of tough rough cost him a bogey 5 and a chance to pull the day's biggest upset.

The odds on Bud Ward to repeat were lowered here tonight as Spokane's defending champion, acknowledged to be the best Simonpure in years, proved that over the 15 other double winners. He swamped the veteran Ellis Knowles, 6 and 5, in the first round, and had far too many shots for former college champ Freddie Haas in the second, winning, 3 and 2, a total of 3 under par for the day.

Three other former champions made it a perfect day for the former amateur titlists. Jess Sweetser, also a former British titleholder, kneeled, sat, and layed down at various times, as he defeated Duke's slow-motion captain, Skip Alexander, 2 and 1, and Henry Kowal, 4 and 2. Johnny Fisher waited 18 full holes for a morning-round victory over Dan Carmichael, of Columbus, and went the route again in the afternoon as he eliminated Bogart's conqueror, Bishop. Willie Turnesa had trouble in the morning before he finally ousted the tournament's longest hitter, former National Public Links Champion Bruce McCormack, but he was up all the way in scoring over Frank "Shanty" Allan, of Pittson, Pa.

"Trailer Bill" Holt was joined in the crying room in the afternoon by other nationally known figures such as Scotty Campbell, Seattle; Haas, and Bus Moreland.

Georgetown University is still well represented. The 1928 intercollegiate champ from the Hilltop, Maurice McCarthy, of Cincinnati, scored only second to Ward as he raced through Ed Overton and Bill Holt. Johnny Burke, the 1937 intercollegiate titlist, was even for nine holes when he beat Skinker, but he swamped the Texan with two first names, Billy Bob Coffey, 5 and 4, in the afternoon. McCarthy was even par for the day. Hoya Sophomore Jack Donohue, of Sioux City, lost to Moreland's 50-foot putt on the seventeenth in the first round.

Willie O'Steen Herbert, top-seeded in the women's division, advanced to the semifinals at the expense of Helen Levy, 6—1, 6—1. Mrs. Dorette Miller, after dropping the first set to Eleanor Voith at 6—3, steadied down to win the last two sets, 6—2, 6—1.

Hoya Grid Card Altered to Avoid Clash With Nats

As the result of a shift made necessary in order to avoid conflict with a baseball game involving the Washington Nationals and New York Yankees, Georgetown University's football team will appear in four nocturnal games this season.

Three of these are scheduled for Griffith Stadium and another with Temple University in Philadelphia on October 4.

Graduate Manager of Athletics H. Gabriel Murphy yesterday announced that the Hoyas will open their season against Roanoke College at Griffith Stadium on Saturday night, September 28, instead of on Saturday afternoon as originally scheduled. This is one of the few Saturday night college games ever featured locally.

Sandlot Nines Shift Title Date To See Grid Game

Because players of Miller Furniture and Klein Tavern nines, who were scheduled to meet Sunday in a double-header with the league crown at stake, wished to see the Washington Redskins in their first home game, an agreement was reached whereby the teams will play Saturday instead.

The site remains the same, the South Ellipse, and the starting time will be 1 p. m. Junior and B Sections of the same league will play as scheduled on Sunday. In the first Naiman Photo and Kneesi Cubs will tangle on the East Ellipse at 10:30 a. m., and in the second Plaza Tile and Capital Cafe meet on the South Ellipse.

Clarendon Pinmen Top District Bowling Opener

Washington's largest duckpin association, the District League, got under way over six alleys last night, with Clarendon's quintet combining for the best total—1,915. That was good enough for an old game victory over Kingpin. Clarendon tied for high-team game with Arcadia with 683.

Hokie Smith led the Lucky Strike five to a sweep over Lafayette with game of 150 and 423 set. Penn Recreation took 2 out of 3 games from Georgetown, the champion Rosslyn team swept three from Brookland, Chevy Chase took the odd clash from Arcadia, and Convention Hall lost two to Hyattsville as Perce Wolfe rolled 149-387.

The C. & P. Telephone League also opened at Chevy Chase. 16 teams showing up for first action. Michigan five led the rolling with a 641 game and 1,758 set.

With a sizzling 140-high game, John Anderson, of Arcade-Pontiac, set the pace last night at the Ice Palace alleys as the Washington Automotive Bowling League opened its twentieth season with a record turnout of 18 teams.

George Walper, of H. B. Leary, took high individual set honors with a 377. In the team competition, the American Automobile Association rollers won three from Emerson & Orme No. 2 and rolled up a high game of 603, while Paul Brothers had high team set of 1,722 in taking three from McMahon rollers.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Heroes were few and far between as far as the Nats were concerned yesterday, so Man of the Month point awards are correspondingly skimpy.

The star, if any, of the Senators' loss to Chicago, was George Washington Case, who turned in a fine day at bat. He therefore takes down the bulk of points.

To Case, eight points, because he contributed a home run and two singles to the losing cause, bringing in one run himself and chasing three mates across the plate.

To Rick Ferrell, three points for as many hits, though only one figured in a Washington run.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, two points, because he was involved in both the double plays the Nats perpetrated.

N. Y. Exchange Votes Against Longer Hours

Petition Turned Down; Chicago Market to Extend Trading

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 11.—The board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange decided today to leave unchanged the present closing hour of 3 p. m., New York time, on weekdays and noon on Saturdays, after consideration of a petition from member firms for a longer session.

At the same time, the governors of the Chicago Stock Exchange, considering a similar proposal, decided to extend the trading period on that market, which has heretofore operated simultaneously with New York, by one hour on weekdays and one-half hour on Saturdays.

The effective date, which will keep Chicago open one hour later than New York Mondays through Fridays and one-half hour on Saturdays, is expected to be set September 30.

The agitation for a longer trading period in both markets was said to have been based on hopes of increased business, particularly since trading in Wall Street has recently been at the lowest levels in more than 20 years. Agitation was intensified in Chicago by the fact that since its time is normally one-hour later than New York, there was barely time for trading after the lunch hour.

Most active proponents of a later close in Wall street were said to have been Pacific Coast members firms, since 3 p. m. Eastern Daylight Time, is only 11 a. m., Pacific Standard Time.

The decision of the New York exchange governors to retain the traditional trading hours, which are the same as New York banking hours, was said to have been based on several factors, among them being dougt that a later close would appreciably increase business, and fears that it would increase expense in the form of staff overtime.

Also, a source close to the exchange said the board of governors was "impressed" by communications sent to William McC. Martin, jr., president, by many newspapers, some as far west as the Rocky mounting doubt that a later close would disrupt final market edition schedules and hamper publication of securities quotation tables.

Six-Cylinder Car Not Shown in '41 Ford Preview

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 11.—The much-talked-about Ford six-cylinder engine is not going to make its appearance in the Ford 1941 models at this time.

That's one of the things a group of about 200 newspaper and trade publication representatives learned today when they "previewed" the Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars for the coming model season. There was no official discussion of the smaller Ford motor at today's ceremonies, but in some authoritative quarters the impression is growing that the company plans to introduce it as an optional installation in one of the two regular Ford models some time after next January 1.

With the usual varying body styles, the Ford "de Luxe" and "Super de Luxe" models, the Mercury and three Lincolns were shown today, preliminary to the formal public introduction later this month. The Lincoln line—a "Zephyr," a "Continental" and a "Custom."—will be shown publicly on September 20 and the Fords and Mercury a week later.

Longer wheelbases and wider bodies, lower springs and semi-concealed running boards feature all of the new models shown today. Price schedules were not disclosed.

Holiday Week Cuts Power Output

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Electric power output dropped to 2,462,622,000 kilowatt hours in the Labor Day week ended September 7, or 5.3 per cent less than 2,601,127,000 in the preceding week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Latest production, however, was still 7.5 per cent ahead of 2,289,960,000 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1939 week, which also included Labor Day.

The decline was more than seasonably anticipated. Hence the Associated Press power index, based on 1929-30 as 100, declined to 129 from 129.8 a week earlier. A year ago the index, adjusted for seasonal trend, was 123.4.

Record Steel Output This Year Predicted

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Iron Age forecast today 1940 steel production would exceed 64,000,000 net tons, a record high, if output over the remainder of the year equals the August rate.

Robey, Mrs. Sharpe Elevated By Bank of Commerce Here

FRANCIS E. ROBEY

MRS. HELEN R. SHARPE

Two executive positions at the Bank of Commerce and Savings were filled yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the board of directors.

Francis E. Robey, formerly assistant cashier, was elected cashier, succeeding Thomas J. Groom who had held that office in addition to that of executive vice president.

Mrs. Helen R. Sharpe, formerly assistant secretary, was elected secretary, succeeding Joseph H. Milans who retired due to the law forbidding interlocking directorates.

Also, Thomas J. Norris, manager of the H street branch, was elected assistant cashier. He will continue to serve as branch manager.

Mr. Robey is immediate past president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking. He began his career with the present institution in 1918 and has advanced through all the departments. A member of the Washington Board of Trade, he is well known in civic and financial circles.

Mrs. Sharpe has been associated with the bank for ten years and has been active in the affairs of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, being past chairman of the safe deposit section. At the same time it was announced that the directors of the bank had declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable September 30, 1940, to stockholders of record September 20, 1940.

3 New Issues Offered Under Eased Ruling

SEC Makes First Use Of Measure Allowing Reduced Wait

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 11.—Three corporate security issues were placed on the market today as the Securities and Exchange Commission made first use of its recently-granted power to reduce the usual 20-day waiting period to speed new financing.

Despite caution noticeable in other markets over the battle of England, corporate financing under way or in sight was the broadest since the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries last spring.

New issues offered publicly consisted of $15,000,000 Dow Chemical Co. debentures, $3,500,000 Houston Natural Gas Co., 4 per cent first mortgage bonds, and 25,000 shares of United Biscuit Co., 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

An offering of $6,000,000 3¼ per cent debentures of the Western Auto Supply Co., was made yesterday.

The Dow Chemical issue—partly intended to raise funds for expansion of plant facilities for manufacture of magnesium, a light metal used in airplanes—emerged from SEC registry 13 days after the filing. Congress gave the commission discretion to shorten the waiting period prescribed in the securities acts.

The Houston Natural Gas offering was made effective seven days after filing. The bonds, priced at 100, were floated to raise funds for retiring $2,805,000 in bonds of a predecessor company.

The United Biscuit stock, offered at $102 a share and accrued dividends, was intended to raise funds to redeem at $110 a share 9,798 shares of outstanding 7 per cent preferred and to provide capital in part for a new plant at Cincinnati.

Among issues expected to appear soon were $29,000,000 Columbus & Southern Ohio Eelctric 3¼, $32,000,000 International Paper Co., first mortgage bonds, and $16,500,000 San Antonio Public service 3¼s.

U. S. Court Approves C. & N. W. Proposal

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Federal Judge John P. Barnes approved today the Interstate Commerce Commission plan for reorganization of the Chicago & North Western Railroad under Section 77-B of the bankruptcy act.

Objections had been made to the plan by the railroad and by common and preferred stockholders on the ground they would lose their investment.

The plan provides for recapitulation of the properties without representation of the present common and preferred holders in the new company. Their holdings had an estimated value of $180,000,000.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Specialty cotton goods items received increased attention today in the textile market and prices on 17 lines held firm at unchanged levels. Demand for woolen sweaters improved; underwear mills were busy on civilian orders. Rayon twills and the more popular spun yarn constructions moved in fair volume. Silk goods remained quiet.

British Corner Of World Wool Surplus Bared

Needed U. S. Imports Declared Subject to Price Dictation

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department said yesterday the British government had gained control over a major portion of the world's export surplus of wool and consequently was in a position to dominate prices both abroad and in this country.

This control over prices, officials said, was expected to be reflected in American Government outlays for clothing, blankets and other woolen products being ordered for military use under the defense program.

The department predicted that, due largely to defense orders, imports between now and next March would exceed 120,000,000 pounds. In the full year before the war imports totaled about 100,000,000 pounds.

The department said the British government had recently taken over the wool output of the Union of South Africa. A year ago it acquired the Australian and New Zealand wool clips for duration of the war and one clip thereafter.

As a consequence, only the production of Argentina and Uruguay, remaining surplus sources of any importance, are outside British control.

Fleming Suggests 5-Day Bank Week

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 11 (AP).—Col. Philip B. Fleming, Federal wage and hours administrator, suggested here today that some banks might find it easier to comply with the wage and hours law by closing Saturday mornings or Wednesday afternoons.

Addressing the Iowa Bankers Association convention, he said banks "in a number of localities are now operating successfully on a 40-hour week and are remaining closed on Saturday morning."

"In some communities," he continued, "it might not be possible to remain closed all day on Saturday, but perhaps it would be possible to close at noon on Wednesday."

Retail Sales, Power Output Hop in Month

Four Indices Now Indicate Record Trade Rise Here

Two more barometers bear out expectations that August business in Washington was near or exceeded a record level for that month. Retail sales and power output scored sharp gains last month to join the upward march in the District of Columbia.

The Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond yesterday revealed that sales of five Washington department stores jumped 20.8 per cent in August over the same 1939 month. This was one of the sharpest advances on record and contrasts with an upturn of only 8.6 per cent in August, 1939, over the 1938 month. For the first eight months this year local retail sales were 8.3 per cent ahead of last year.

For the Federal Reserve district as a whole retail sales were 20 per cent ahead of the same month last year and 9 per cent improved in the first eight months.

Total sales were 79,327,945 kilowatt hours, against 71,537,673 in August, 1939. Sales to railroads and railways advanced 8.11 per cent in the month. Street lighting sales remained about steady, while other sales showed a gain of 11.45 per cent.

As previously reported, postal receipts here in August hopped to $610,829 and recorded an all-time high for that month, and bank clearings jumped to an 11-year high during August.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—The wheat market's recovery was extended today but price gains that amounted to as much as a cent a bushel at one time were reduced materially before the close. Strength in securities and reports of improved Canadian export business with Great Britain and Portugal, as well as better feeling about the war situation, despite havoc being wrought in London, helped to lift prices. The warning of Premier Churchill of an early German attempt at invasion and Berlin threats of increased air attacks chilled buying sentiment in final dealings, however.

Wheat closed ½ to ⅞ higher than yesterday, September 75½, December 78¾@78⅞; corn unchanged to ¼ up, September 63¼, December 57⅛@57¼; oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up; rye ⅛ to ¾ higher and lard 5 to 17 higher.

Some buying was attributed to the Government insurance agency which took 30,000 bushels at Kansas City yesterday, bringing total purchases to 305,000 bushels. The British bought six to eight cargoes of Canadian flour and, although the business apparently was part of previously contracted sales, it attracted attention, inasmuch as some dealers thought increased takings of processed grain may have some relation to the bombing of industrial targets.

The Canadian business was in contrast to lagging domestic export trade. United States exports of wheat and flour during July, first month of the 1940-1941 season, totaled only 3,686,000 bushels, compared with 7,270,000 in 1939 and 12,764,000 in 1938.

Helping to keep corn prices from advancing was the fact that while the United States supply, including carry-over, was estimated about 245,000,000 bushels less than a year ago, this was more than offset by increased supplies of oats and barley. Light scattered frost was reported in parts of Iowa and Nebraska and the official forecast indicated more frost could be expected in parts of Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Stocks Ease as Jittery Traders Shorten Commitments on Churchill Warning

New York, Sept. 11.—Winston Churchill's warning to the British people that the long-looked-for Nazi invasion is near caused weakness in stocks today after general advance in the forenoon. The early rise had been led by aircrafts, steels and other war issues and these descriptions suffered most when the ever jittery professional crowd began to shorten commitments.

Eleven of the 12 major industrial and rail groups were behind minus signs at the end of the session. Only the blue-chip manufacturing issues retained any part of the early rise.

Foreign exchange dealings provided no reflection of apprehensions over London's ordeal, and British Empire obligations were largely steady in the bond market. News of the oversubscription of four fair-sized new bond and stock issues was followed by moderate betterment of many domestic corporate liens.

The latest and more horrific threats of the German leader, coupled with a further stepping-up of bombing raids by both sides, were quite depressing enough to swamp any bullish feelings on the part of traders. The morning buying had been sparked by announcement that the War Deportment had instructed aviation companies to procure immediately the materials for a vast number of airplanes, engines and propellers, and by the award of numerous Government contracts in the national defense program.

In the meantime, reporting agencies said that business the country over is responding to Government activity. The Iron Age said that steel production has reached 92.5 per cent of capacity at mid-week, a new high for the year. If the industry continues through the last quarter at this pace, the magazine pointed out, aggregate steel production for the year will be around 64,000,000 net tons, an all-time peak.

The higher operating position of the steel industry was mirrored in steel scrap markets where further advances on substantial sales of material caused the composite price for all markets to equal the year's high. Holiday effects caused power production for the last week to show a decline against the preceding week, but output remained substantially above the comparable 1939 period. In the railroad field an important item was the New York Central authorization for a 65,000-ton rail purchase. Several reports testified to increased employment in leading industries.

New York Central was the most active stock although it was half a point down at the close. Steel common, Bethelehem and Republic were representatives of that group among the 15 top issues of the day, all off large fractions to a point. Chrysler gave up a point and General Motors a half, while Graham-Paige dropped 33 1-3 per cent of its market value when it closed at ½, off ⅛. Boeing Airplane sold as high as 16½ but finished at 15⅞, up ⅛. Douglas added 2 with its last price the best of the day. Lockheed, United Aircraft, United Air Lines and several others were fractionally behind.

Rearmament Takes 2½ Years, Predicts Ayres

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (AP).—Army expenditures accelerated 28 times faster in 1917's first five war months than in a corresponding period of 1940, Col. Leonard P. Ayres declared today.

Asserting that records of actual expenditures "are much better guides for comparing the relative progress of our preparedness efforts * * * than reports of appropriations made or of contracts placed," he said:

"Clearly no such increasing momentum is under way at presen."

Col. Ayres, chief statistician of the American Expeditionary Force, said a study of the United States World War effort led to this "best rough estimate":

"Military rearmament is a process that takes us about two and one-half years, if we devote to it the almost fierce energy and nearly universal cooperation that characterized our military effort in the World War."

Exchange Workers Granted Army Leaves

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—William McC. Martin, jr., president of the New York Stock Exchange, today advised the 600 employes of the institution between 21 and 31, who would be subject to military training under the pending conscription bill, they would be considered on leave of absence during their training and would receive adjusted compensation.

Employes having dependents will receive full stock exchange pay for three months, less Army pay, and others will receive regular pay for one month less Army allowances.

Burley Leaf Growers Set Referendum Date

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 11 (AP).—Representatives of growers in the nine principal burley tobacco States, called here to recommend a date for this year's referendum on 1941 burley marketing quotas, voted unanimously yesterday for Saturday, November 23.

The recommendation must be approved by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard.

Sugar Futures

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Helped by speculative interest, domestic sugar futures closed unchanged to 2 points higher today, in the face of a 1-point recession in spot raw sugar.

Sales totaled 2,200 tons. The market received mild stimulus from trade reports suggesting possibility of a reduction in the import duty of 90 cents a 100 pounds on Cuban sugar.

Nearly 1,500 tons of Philippine raw sugar due October 4, sold at 2.70 a pound, a 1-cent dip. Other offerings were confined to duty-frees from 2.73 upward.

Cont. Can Board Votes $25,000,000 Program

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP).—Continental Can Co. directors today approved a three-year expansion and betterment program involving an estimated expenditure of $25,000,000 during the period.

J. F. Hartlieb, president, said the program envisioned the enlargement and improvement of research, engineering and can manufacturing facilities at several of the company's 38 plants in the United States, Canada and Cuba.

Details of the program have not yet beeen worked out completely, company officers said.

Exchange Markets

New York, Sept. 11 (AP).—Another ½ cent drop in the Canadian dollar today brought the week's losses to nearly 2 cents.

Foreign money dealers said two factors were at work: Maturing Canadian bonds, which tend to send dominion currency southward across the border, and contraction in tourist demand for money. The unit closed at 88⅜ United States cents.

Free sterling rose ⅛ cent to $4.03½. The Swiss franc stayed at 22.79 United States cents. New pressure developed against the currencies of Honkong and Shanghai. The free Argentine peso rose 1-30 of a cent.

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Foreign Markets

The rally was led by British government bonds which in some cases halved morning declines with gains of ⅛ to ¼ point. Kaffirs, depressed at the outset by South African offerings, also came back.

Liverpool—Cotton futures finished 10 points lower to 3 higher today. Near months turned back under influence of a sharp break in Egyptian cotton. Late deliveries were steadied by absence of indications of possible release of barter cotton.

Wheat, Cotton Inch Forward; Copper Drops

Churchill Speech Causes Setback In Late Trading

By the Associated Press

Wheat, cotton and corn improved in futures markets yesterday, but many commodities in the international trade group declined.

At Chicago wheat closed ⅛ to ½ cent a bushel higher, and corn ended unchanged to ¼ up. Buying power derived from reports of better Canadian export business and more confidence in British resistance. The Churchill speech, however, started a late setback.

Inching ahead were cocoa, sugar and cottonseed oil. Wool tops moved irregularly.

U. S. Oil Stocks Heavier in July

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday a 7,147,000-barrel increase in the stocks of all oils during July.

It said the July 31 total was 373,357,000 barrels, or a 151-day supply, compared with 566,210,000 barrels on June 30, and with 571,448,000 on July 31 a year ago.

Aviation gasoline stocks increased from 3,904,000 barrels in June to 4,099,000 in July, and domestic demand rose from 401,000 barrels to 689,000. Exports, however, dropped from 646,000 to 210,000.

St. Louis, Sept. 11 (AP).—Fifty coat manufacturers and fur jobbers purchased 30,787 Alaskan sealskins from the United States Government at the semi-annual auction sale here.

The sealskins brought an average of $21.08 each, a 3.3 per cent advance in price.

The highest bidder was a syndicate composed of Lehman Brothers; Hemphill, Noyes & Co., and Eldridge & Co., of New York, and Stein Bros. & Boyce, of Baltimore.

Contract Bridge

"Will you be good enough to settle a dispute which arose in a family bridge game not long ago?" asks D. E. L. "We use the Blackwood convention (under a certain amount of paternal protest, however), but didn't realize until this particular hand that we were not very clear about its use.

"Is a five no-trump bid, not preceded by the four no trump, necessarily a part of the Blackwood? In our disputed hand, I held all four aces, and contended that it was not, therefore, necessary to make the four no-trump bid.

"The bidding went like this, with my partner and me, North and South, not vulnerable, but with a partial score of 60 points; East-West vulnerable and East dealer:

East	South	West	North
Pass	2♠	Pass	3♡
Pass	5 N T	Pass	Pass
Pass

"The bidding, I'll admit, was bad all around, but I still feel that my partner should have recognized the request for kings. As it happened, there was a cold six in spades or no trump. Had my partner shown me her two kings, I would have bid six spades, which we make easily."

The hands lay thus:

North
♠ 9 2
♡ K Q J 8
◇ K J 4
♣ J 10 9 7
South
♠ A Q J 10 5 4
♡ A 4
◇ A Q 7
♣ A K

The opening lead was a small club. West held the king of spades, so that the finesse failed, but no other tricks were lost.

To our knowledge the Blackwood bid is like other conventions; it is necessary to go through the motions even though the preliminary call of four no trump, asking for aces, is superfluous. Five no trump, asking partner to indicate his number of kings should be preceded by four no trump. However, with the hand under discussion, it should be obvious to North that a slam can be made from the opening bid, and that what is the best declaration is the only serious question. Whether North realized it was the Blackwood bid or not, he should have made some response to five no trump.

Six no trump or six spades is an equally satisfactory declaration and should have been reached, though we would not recommend South's jumping from three hearts to five no trump. Partners are usually more responsive if protected from shocks by gentle and easy climbing.

Listen! with Glynn

It may not sound nice to say so, but one of the chief reasons for the success of radio's quiz shows is that they make listeners feel superior.

Sitting comfortably at home, without the slightest touch of microphone fright and without the embarrassment of being stared at by a studio audience, one can usually answer the questions much better and more quickly than can the generally flustered quiz guest, no matter who he or she is.

And, as a result, we listeners feel pretty puffed up at having proved ourselves so smart, at least smarter than the poor person who literally is on the spot and who might do just as well as we under as comfortable circumstances.

Some persons thoroughly at home before the microphone are to take part in "Vox Pop" over WJSV at 6:30 tonight, however. And it might be an interesting little game to take the quiz with them and see if you do as well as usual.

They include Washington's own Helen Hayes, who's to start her own radio show over C. B. S. later this month; S. N. Behrman, the playwright; Gilbert Miller, the producer; Al Jolson, Martha Raye, Sam Levene, Lyle Talbot, Arlene Francis, Sheila Barrett, Bert Lahr, Carol Bruce and Olsen and Johnson.

The Post Radio Time Table

6:30, WJSV—Helen Hayes, about to begin her own air series on winter Sunday evenings, attends a novel baptism, that of the new Stage Magazine with S. N. Behrman, Gilbert Miller, Al Jolson, Shelia Barrett and other theatrical notables. All this through Vox Pop.

U. S. Chemists Find Terrific New Explosive

Society Also Told Of Paint That Kills Disease Germs

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 11.—Four new chemical miracles—wall paint which kills disease germs, a terrific explosive, electrical weaving and the first step in synthetic quinine from oil wells—were announced to the American Chemical Society today.

The antisecptic paints are made with a little chlorine or iodine, result of thousands of experiments. They were reported by S. S. Epstein and Foster D. Snell, Brooklyn, N. Y. These paints kill typhoid and some other germs for nine weeks and retain some killing power after six years on the wall. They kill molds and yeasts. Uses are children's rooms, hospitals and damp places like breweries, where molds and yeasts spoil beer.

The explosive is a combination of butadiene, the stuff with which Germany makes synthetic rubber, and ozone. It was discovered at Syracuse University and is so sensitive its power has not been measured. However, a laboratory explosion showed it is terrific. A little exploded in a metal apparatus. Fifteen feet away stood a water bottle. A bit of metal drilled two clean holes, one through each side of the bottle, something no bullet could ordinarily do.

The electrical weaving machine makes the velvet type of fabrics. Velvet is ordinarily made by sewing in threads and cutting off their ends like mown grass. In the new way electrostatic forces pick up short threads and shoot them like arrows, to stand on their heads, their tips sticking into a new type of resin coating the base fabric.

The quinine discovery, vital in war, because America's supply comes from the Dutch East Indies, was reported by Dr. H. B. Haas and H. C. Huffman, Purdue University. Out of natural gas and other oil-well gases they make a molecule known to be the essential thing in the synthetic quinines, cinchonin and plasmochen. Both these synthetics were discovered in Germany.

Several American laboratories are working hard to make an exclusively American type of synthetic quinine. Dr. Haas is the first to report a practicable way to make the essential molecule.

Spanish Surrealist Painter Here in Quest of Inspiration

SALVADOR DALI AND MME. DALI

The creator of the painting entitled "Piano Descending by Parachute" is a slim Spaniard with pencil-line mustache, curly-cued sideburns and very black eyes who, for his afternoon breakfast, takes benedictine and coffee.

He is, of course, Salvador Dali, leading exponent of Surrealism and currently in Washington to pick up, if he is fortunate, some inspiration.

Yesterday's interview, conducted alternately in French, Spanish and English, took place in the cocktail room and on the terrace of the Hotel Shoreham, where the artist and his Russian wife are spending a few days before returning to the country home near Fredericksburg, Va., which they engaged shortly after coming over from Europe last month.

Plans N. Y. Show

Dali, famed for his canvases of Freudian-inspired subjects, such as symbolical slippers and floating torsos, admitted he's planning a one-man show in New York for November but wouldn't reveal what he will exhibit.

"They are very mysterieuse," he said, with no fear of contradiction. "You must wait for the exhibition."

Dali did unbend, however, to the extent of disclosing he has 14 paintings to show and giving some of their titles. One is the aforementioned "Piano Descending by Parachute." Others include "Original Sin," "The Hour of Victory" and "Resurrection of the Flesh."

"I only hope," he said, "that I can get them across the Atlantic."

Quitting France, where most of his work has been done, just before the Germans came in, he crossed over into Spain but was prevented from taking his paintings with him. They are now in the border city of Hendaye. The Dalis sailed from Lisbon on an American ship.

The Surrealist deprecated reports that, in Spain, he ran afoul the authorities. "I was very well received and departed at my pleasure," he declared.

Incidentally, Dali did learn what the interior of a New York City police station looked like 18 months ago when he was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge. He had smashed a Fifth avenue show window, angered because someone had rearranged the decorations installed by him.

American art, says Dali, isn't ripe yet. That is, our artists have not yet found their idiom, their mythology. "They are too occupied with material things," as he put it.
